"BIG BILL" KELIHER AND JIM CURLEY IN HOT FIST FIGHT IN PARKER HOUSE

Innocent Bystander Put Out. No Moving Pictures Taken. Fight by Rounds.

JAMES M. CURLEY, alderman de facto and councilman-elect and "Big Bill" Keliher, cousin of Congressman John, who fought so hard for Storrow, had a lively scrap before the Parker House bar yesterday afternoon. Both claim the decision. Spectators say it was a draw.

The Kelihers, "Big Bill" and Tom, were at the bar when Curley entered. No long applause for either, but the stage set itself to a nicety. No gentle hand clasps as they took the scratch, but business from the start. Here is the record of the fight:

The Fight by Rounds.

ROUND ONE—"Big Bill" rushes. Cousin Tom grabs Curley, who fights himself free and ducks. "Big Bill" lands for the left ear and misses by four feet. Curley sidesteps the blow easy. "Big Bill," with a roar, comes back and once more aims for Curley's head. Curley long ago learned to duck and was not there.

ROUND TWO—Stronger enters as round begins and yells for fair play. General mixup and back-ups, waiters, hall boys, etc., carry stranger forth into street for fresh air. Comes to in five minutes. Something by principals and much on the black look thing and undertone, mean guy. Time called by the hotel fork, backed by many husky waiters.

Not since two members of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery mixed it up in the Parker House a dozen years ago and nearly pushed each other's eyeballs out by the roots has the "Ancient and Honorable" Parker House had such a wild battle within its bar-room walls. The scrap would make any Tuesday night at the Armory A. A. seem like a Mothers' Congress.

One old friend, the Innocent Bystander, butted into the proceedings with a plea for fair play and promptly was put down for the count. Just who soaked him and just what his name was will probably never be ascertained. Nobody around the Parker House knew it last night.

Yes, verily, blessed is the peace-maker, and the invincible which happened to this particular peace-maker was one of the most distressing features of the Curley-Keliher ruction.

An Awful Ral-de-dal.

There is some difference of versions as to how it started, but there is no doubt about what happened after it was touched off. Nor is there any question as to what it was all about. It was such a spectacular ral-de-dal that the only thing about it to criticise is that the moving picture men were not notified in advance.

There were both political and athletic angles to the mill, not to mention the odor it derived from having the Parker House barroom for the battleground. Only lastly the Parker House reputation might be used as the convention hall for a peace conference. It is ominously orderly. But let a man do so much as sidestep in a harsh tone and five bartenders frown on him in concert.

If he does it twice he is assisted into the lobby and out into Tremont street—he doesn't know exactly how himself, and as a matter of fact the outdoorers don't know whence comes the mysterious Goliath who aches out of thin air and does the assisting.

It took the whole hotel Goliath family yesterday to quell the Curley-Keliher hostilities, say those who were in the barroom when it started. Many who were there at the start were not there at the finish. It takes room to pull off a three-cornered fight with a dozen or so husky barkeeps, porters and waiters trying to restore order.

Parker a Second, Too.

Alderman Curley was seconded by his friend, Parker Weeks, "The Honest Blacksmith" from West Roxbury, and "Big Bill's" second was his cousin Tom, who is a brother of Congressman Keliher. Cousin Tom, say the spectators, didn't do much seconding, a fact which "Big Bill's" friends accept and explain on the ground that "Big Bill" didn't need one.

There may be some truth in that, as old football men who played against Boston University when "Big Bill" was guard on the team will testify. They do so say in those days when "Big Bill" was playing guard he could tear a hole through an opposing line big enough to run a train through.

He was also known as a clever boxer. It is told of him that only eight or ten years ago he, singled-handed, mopped up

UNTERMEYER GETS A FEE OF $172,000

New York Lawyer Arranges Copper Merger Merely as a Side Issue.

Samuel Untermeyer, the New York lawyer and capitalist, has recently been giving a little of his time to consolidating the Boston Consolidated and Utah Copper companies. For his services he has set a price which the consolidated companies have agreed to pay, provided injunction proceedings by opposing interests do not prevent the union.

Mr. Untermeyer, under the present arrangement, will receive in stock of the Utah Company $172,000, the present market price of the stock being 53, his fee being 3,250 shares. In addition the Utah Copper Company will give him a liberal cash consideration.

Boston lawyers and brokers are wondering why Mr. Untermeyer should receive such a big fee. It is believed to be the biggest fee ever paid for work of this kind, and considering the amount of time which the work took from Mr. Untermeyer's other projects it may be considered princely.

Boston Consolidated and the Utah Company are located near each other and many economies can be effected by a consolidation. The Boston Consolidated is owned by the Boston Consolidated and Utah Mining Company of Great Britain and is the only asset of this concern.

Untermeyer secured the consent of the English Company to the sale and effected the agreement. This is why he will get more than $170,000 although there are many able promoters who would have undertaken the job for about one-twentieth of this sum.

"Untermeyer must be a power in both companies when he can drive a bargain like this," was the comment of one Boston broker.

Sidney Jennings, the consulting engineer for the Boston Consolidated, places the companies ore reserves at 37,000,000 tons of 1.5 per cent. copper and the reserves of the Utah Company are figured at 90,000,000 tons of 1.7 per cent. copper. Boston Consolidated sells at 19 and the last quotation on Utah was 53.

MRS. BELMONT BONIFACE!

Will Turn Newport Villa Into Select Hotel Soon.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont is about to take another step outside the limits of "good form" set by that circle of society of which she was the leader before she began to busy herself with the suffrage problem. Before another season has passed, report has it, Mrs. Belmont will have converted "Belcourt," her Newport villa, into a select hotel.

FITZGERALD'S FIRST STEP IS TO CUT SALARIES

In Naming His Office Force, New Mayor Puts Economy Axe in Deep.

MAKES LEAHY SECRETARY

Music Commission Official Gets Important Post; Dick Field Provided For.

WILLIAM A. LEAHY of No. 329 Fourth street, South Boston, at present Secretary of the Music Commission, will be John F. Fitzgerald's Secretary when he is Mayor. Announcement of Leahy's appointment was of the remainder of the office force of the new chief executive was made last evening.

Richard F. Field, assistant secretary to Fitzgerald under his first administration, will fill the same position with the Mayor-elect. Joseph O'Kane, at present clerk of the Common Council, will be chief clerk. Timothy A. Butler will be chief stenographer, and John M. Casey as principal licensing clerk, will serve in the same capacity under Mayor Fitzgerald.

A bigger surprise than the appointments came in the announcement that a general reduction in salaries over those paid in the Mayor's office force under the first Fitzgerald administration and under the present administration of Mayor Hibbard would be made after February 7.

Salaries Sliced Off.

Secretary Leahy's compensation will be $5,000 per year. This is $500 less than Mayor Hibbard's secretary, James C. White, is receiving and $500 less than the secretaries received who served in Fitzgerald's previous administration.

Assistant Secretary Field will receive a salary of $2,000 per year, or a reduction of $500 per year over the salary he was paid two years ago.

Chief Clerk O'Kane will be paid $2,000 per year. This is $1,500 less than he in all present receiving as clerk of the Common Council. The salary of Chief Stenographer Butler was not announced, but that of License Clerk Casey will be permitted to remain at its present figure—$1,800.

Leahy's appointment is purely personal with the new Mayor. They were classmates together at the Boston Latin School. Leahy was one of the most brilliant students who ever graduated from the Boston Latin School. He won nine prizes during his senior year and his success led to the establishment of a rule that no one student could win both the Modern and Classical prizes at the school. He carried his way through Harvard and graduated with distinction. He is forty-five years old and married.

Won $1,000 Short-story Prize.

Before entering the service of the city as Secretary of the Music Commission Leahy was for a short time in the newspaper business. He was appointed Secretary of the Music Commission by Mayor Collins at the request of Fitzgerald, then ex-Congressman, and has served there since 1902. Much of his time has been devoted to literary pursuits, and it was that he might devote more of his time to this work that he voluntarily requested that his salary as Secretary of the Music Commission be reduced from $1,800 to $1,200.

He has been a contributor to a number of magazines and some years ago won a $1,000 prize in a short story competition. His most pretentious work recently was the opera "The Mirrors of Thule," written for and produced by Boston Chapter, Knights of Columbus.

Assistant Secretary Richard F. Field lives in Ward 8 and has been the friend and close personal adviser of the Mayor-elect for many years. He served in same capacity as confidential secretary under the first Fitzgerald administration.

Chief Clerk O'Kane lives at No. 46 Blakeville street, Dorchester, and for the past forty-four years has been connected with the affairs of the Common Council, for the past twenty-five years as clerk. He is a graduate of the Boston Latin School and of Holy Cross College. Through the abolishment of the Common Council he will lose his present position as a fortnight.

Chief Stenographer Butler has been connected with the Mayor's office for many years, and License Clerk Casey has been a city service as messenger under the administration of Mayor Collins.

Arrest in Postal Cases.

The arrest of A. Davis in Altoona, Penn., charged with using the mails to defraud, has been reported to Lawrence Letherman, postoffice inspector for the New England district. Davis is accused of having obtained two diamonds from Boston jewelers without payment, following which suit was entered.

MEAT BOYCOTT IS ORDERED BY GREAT FANEUIL HALL MEETING

Resolution Demands Nation and State at Once Take Action Against Monopoly.

Earnest Speakers Rouse Big Audience; Hundreds Unable to Gain Admission.

Fight Against Meat Trust Taken Up in Other New England Cities.

THE BULL IN THE PANTRY.

THE BEEF TRUST was rocked in the "Cradle of Liberty" last night and roasted to a finish. Ancient Faneuil Hall was packed to the doors with indignant citizens protesting against the high price of food, hundreds were turned away, unable to get inside.

An enthusiastic crowd, obviously of ordinarily conservative nature, hurled protesting jeers at the Beef Trust and applauded thirteen ringing speeches of denunciation.

A resolution was adopted, by every man and woman rising, demanding that the State and National governments act to reduce the cost of living to "a reasonable level" and enforce the criminal and civil laws against monopoly. At the very end the audience voted to begin a meat boycott in Boston at midnight next Saturday.

A committee was appointed to carry on the war to the end.

Turn Batteries on Beef Trust.

The meeting was spontaneous. It was called as late as Friday afternoon by a committee of citizens. The announced purpose was a revolt against the excessive cost of all the necessities of life. But the entire crowd turned loose its batteries upon the Beef Trust.

The people were in deadly earnest. While dozens were fighting to get the floor, every speaker had a respectful hearing. The program of speeches was smashed, so many clamored to be heard that those who finally got the platform were partly men whose names had not been on the original program.

In advance a committee of citizens had determined to have a meeting which would be expressive of the real level-headed sentiment of Boston. Their idea carried well. The audience was representative of the great "middle class," sprinkled here and there with men and women pathetically poor. It was a great, patient American gathering. Its resolutions were of the kind to compel attention.

An hour before the meeting the hall was half full. A quarter of an hour before it was due to begin, Max Mitchell, superintendent of the Federation of Jewish Charities, saw that few more could be seated and immediately decided to begin proceedings. Before he had fairly started, men were standing in the rear and at 8 o'clock people were streaming away from Faneuil Hall because they could not get inside.

"People Are the Leaders Now."

"I don't know of another time in the history of Boston or of the United States when there has been such an outburst of the people," he said. "There are no leaders. The people have started out of their own motion to get justice for themselves. If they succeed in this movement, they will succeed in others. That is what this outburst means.

"The representatives of the Beef Trust say that the cause of high prices is that there is not meat enough produced in this country to meet the requirements of the people. Yet steamers leave our shores every day, carrying American cattle which sells at ten cents a pound less in England than in the United States. We want to make them understand, and we want to understand ourselves, that our first duty is to ourselves.

"Nothing can withstand the power of the people when the people know what they want."

The first of many surprises of the meeting occurred when Dr. Herbert E. Peckham, a Colorado man, got the platform. He is a stout, cut young Westerner. He talked in breezy, but sober fashion. He talked about where cattle is raised.

"At last the volcano has come to the point of eruption," he began. "No one knows what the result will be. But we do know that it will be something.

"I lived in Colorado where the great prairies produce our meat supply. I had to pay out of my daily toil 38 to 42 cents a pound for steak. I began to wonder why they taxed us such exorbitant prices in the very country where meat was raised. I found that the ranchmen were selling meat to representatives of the Beef Trust for four or five cents a pound, that it was shipped to Omaha, Kansas City and Chicago to be dressed and then sent back to us. I

DIXIE BEAUTY HAPPY AT DANCE WITH TAFT

"We All Call Him a Dear," Says Gen. Hill's Niece After Waltz at Southern Ball.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—"I am taking my honors as a lady should," laughed Miss Pearce Hume, the beautiful niece of General A. P. Hill of the Confederate Army, who danced with President Taft at the Southern relief ball last night.

"No, I was not at all surprised when the President asked me to dance, but I was worn out with dancing and I am afraid he made a mistake when he asked me to waltz as I was not up to my usual pace.

"The President is no plebeian dancer," she exclaimed, "really fairy-like on his feet." With a merry laugh she whispered, "But a little short-winded."

"His waltzing is in perfect attune with the music and with a certain boyish abandon.

"We only made short turns around the room," she said. "The President, I think, saw how tired I was and suggested our stopping, but he looked like he wanted some more dancing. All the women of the Southern Relief Corps feel that the President did a beautiful thing by coming to the ball, as President Roosevelt would not come and would not allow Mrs. Roosevelt to be one of the patronesses, an omission that always pained us immensely.

"President Taft's presence has just won the hearts of the women of the South and we all call him a 'dear.'"

FAIR WEATHER TODAY.

Cold, Too, Is Included in the Official Forecast.

More cold weather is predicted by the man in the coming tower on the top of the Federal Building. Fair and colder, he said last night. Fair weather is due for Boston to-day with southwesterly to westerly winds.

The storm that wet Boston somewhat is to-day centred over Perry Sound, somewhere north of Ontario, and is passing east to sea by the St. Lawrence River route. It was snowing late last night in Pittsburg and the central Atlantic States, with cloudy weather in the Mississippi valley.

$200,000 FLOOD LOSS.

Hartford Suffers Heavily By Overflow of Rivers.

HARTFORD, Ct., Jan. 22.—About $200,000 and possibly much more damage was done in this city last night and to-day by the overflowing of the Park and Connecticut Rivers, pouring cellars and basements. At the Garde Hotel, Merchandise stored in the cellar was damaged $10,000, and furnace fires were extinguished.

IRISH PARTY TO BE THE BIG POWER IN BRITAIN

Liberal Lead Dwindles Almost to the Vanishing Point, With the Nationalists Practically Sure of Balance of Power

Demand for Home Rule Must Be Acceded to, or All Imperial Policies of the New Ministry May Be Effectually Blocked

Unionists Have Gained 100 Seats Up to Date, and Asquith's Utterances Grow Pessimistic; Women Are Active

LONDON, Jan. 22.—The Liberal wave continues to sweep the country. The standing of the parliamentary parties, up to date, is as follows:

Liberals	188
Nationalists	67
Laborites	33
Total for Ministry	288
Unionists (opposition)	218

The Unionists have made a total gain of 100 thus far, the Liberals 11 and the Laborites 1. London complete stands: Unionists 34, Liberals 28.

Complete returns from yesterday's polling, in which 56 seats were contested, show the following results: Unionists 32, Liberals 20, Nationalists 3, Laborites 1.

Twenty-four seats were contested to-day. The results probably will not be completed before Monday. The most interesting figure before the country in to-day's election was Chancellor Lloyd George, who expected an easy victory in the Carnovon Borough.

Irish Hold the Key.

Unless all signs fail the complete vindication of Parnell's policy for Ireland is close at hand. The great battle of the ballots which is now being waged is almost certain to end with the key to the situation resting tight in the hands of the Irish party. This will mean possibilities of immense importance both to Britain and Ireland.

It is the most interesting crisis that has come in the Irish movement for national self-government since Ireland lost her parliament by the act of union, in 1800.

The situation is so acute that declare action on the question of Irish home rule has become not merely advisable from a party sense but literally imperative from the standpoint of the empire at large.

The world-spread British empire is now at a legislative standstill, with inclination to dissolution. The two wheels which keep the imperial machinery in motion cannot again revolve until the new ministers "kiss hands" to the King and take up the work outlined in their respective portfolios. To carry on this work the ministry must be backed by what is known as a working majority, that is a leadership in members on the side of the ministry sufficiently large to carry through all bills introduced by the government on every division challenged by the opposition during all three readings.

Majority Often Threatened.

This working majority is being continually threatened with extinction from a variety of causes. The members of the House of Commons being unpaid, are somewhat less amenable to party discipline than are the members of the United States Congress. For instance, they absent themselves from the House to attend to their private business concerns, to go grouse shooting on the moors of Scotland, to take in the races at Dorchester, the Derby or the Grand National, to enjoy the Henley regatta; to take a trip over to the Continent; to see the Grand Prix, or make an excursion up the Rhine, through the Swiss lakes or, as it happens this year, to see the Passion Play at Oberammergau.

These and a hundred similar attractions are the foe of the ministerial working majority, as they are also the terror and nightmare of the Government party whips, who are held responsible by the leaders to keep the party strength above the danger point.

The Irish party knows no such diversions from duty as grouse-shooting, days at the Derby, or trips to the Continent. It is literally hard labor for them, from the opening of the session till the day Parliament is prorogued, when they go back to

POLITICAL CHAOS THREATENING ENGLAND, ELECTION SO CLOSE

Irish Nationalists Will Be in a Position to Dictate to Either Party.

Unionists Continue to Gain and the Liberal Lead Is Dwindling Fast.

Ireland, to give an account of their stewardship. They are sent to London to fight for Ireland on the floor of the House of Commons, fight after night, week in and week out, and to be keenly watchful for every opportunity to advance the cause of Ireland, whose soldiers they are.

This vigilant and well led parliamentary contingent has already worked wonders for Ireland. In thirty years it has accomplished a veritable revolution in behalf of a country which, before the advent of Parnell and Davitt, had travelled far into the Valley of Despair and was bleeding to death through the emigration of her youth.

Doubt is expressed whether Premier Asquith would take office in case the Liberals have only a small plurality outside of the Nationalists on the entire poll. A coalition ministry might, of course, result.

Asquith has announced that the question of the depriving the Lords of power to vote on financial questions must come first in the new Parliament. The Irish party failed to vote for the budget in the House of Commons and gave evidence of being split on other questions. However, it is regarded as certain that they will present a solid front for home rule and will be in a position to drive a hard bargain with either the Unionists or Liberals.

The most serious setback to the Liberals in yesterday's polling was the defeat of Joseph Alcott Pease, the Liberal whip. He was beaten by his Unionist opponent by a vote of 4,393 to 4,041. In the last election his majority exceeded 1,000.

Francis Dyke Acland, financial secretary to the war office, also went down to defeat in the Richmond seat of Yorkshire, North Riding. He is the fifth minister beaten in the present election. Acland, too, is the ardent tariff reformer, was re-elected in the Whitehead division of Surrey by more than 2,200 majority.

Lord Vernon Harcourt, last commissioner of works, retained his seat for the Rossendale division of Lancashire, by a slightly increased majority over the Union candidate. His wife is the daughter of the late Walter H. Burns of New York.

The speeches of Asquith and Lloyd George and other Liberal leaders give the coming home preliminate as the results come in. The Premier now qualifies his estimate of what he will do with "if you will give us an adequate majority."

The tariff reformers are jubilant over the showing made in Yorkshire where the free traders were overwhelmingly routed. Three seats there, two formerly occupied by Liberals, went to the Unionists.

The women have been especially active in the campaign.

Mrs. Mary Ann Astor, who is not a Suffragette, did some enthusiastic campaigning in behalf of her husband in his hot contest for Parliament in Kent. Astor, however, forged strongly against his foe and he lost. The fight was a big pill one from the first because it was by mutual authority had to be overcome by Astor and Lady Astor, the latter's cousin, Sir Mortimer Durand, before they could win.

"We Will Win Yet."

Young Mrs Astor, who was beautiful Nancy Langhorne of Virginia, was not in the least cast down by her defeat in the first campaign of her life.

"We will win yet," declared Mrs. Astor. "Only time for fighting was too short. But just wait."

The poor health of Mr. Astor compelled him to leave for a quieter climate in the midst of his fight. His father, William Waldorf Astor, came here to help and from his Italian home at Sorrento, but as he only reached here three days before the election he was not able to accomplish much. The elder Astor made several addresses for his son.

Young Mr. Astor said that he had started already to make plans for the next election. He said that his side would have 2,500 majority then and that he felt sure of winning. He is said to have paid the campaign expenses of Sir Mortimer Durand, the entire campaign costing him a pretty penny.

OVERTAKES RUNAWAY WIFE.

But She Tells Hubby to Run Home and Care for the Children.

PORTLAND, Me., Jan. 22.—"You go back to the children or give them to me. I've got a job in a restaurant." This is the greeting Frank Cauney of Rochester, N. H., received when he overtook his runaway wife on Congress street this afternoon. Mrs. Edith Cauney, with her sister-in-law, Flossie, fifteen years old, left her husband's home in Rochester Wednesday. Flossie, threatened with arrest as a stubborn child, went back to Rochester, but not Mrs. Cauney.

BOY A FIRE HERO.

Three Children Saved in Burning of East Boston House.

Three little children were saved from a fire in the tenement house at No. 47 North Margin street yesterday by Louis Trabucco, fourteen years old, of No. 58 Auburn street. The rescued are Annie, Mary and John Limbo, who were left by their mother to amuse themselves. Annie is said to have started a fire which swept away much of the interior decoration before she realized what she had done. The Trabucco boy saw the flames, ran into the house and took the children to safety.

HIBBARD MAN OUT TO HEAD COMMITTEE

The fight for the presidency of the Republican City Committee for 1910 will be threshed out at Wesleran Hall on next Friday night, President David T. Montague issuing the call for the meeting last night.

Ex-Representative William B. Wilcutt of Ward 24, who supported Mayor Hibbard in his recent campaign and former President Edward G. Graves are the candidates. It will be a test of strength of those who stood behind Hibbard and that portion of the machine which worked for Storrow. Each side says it has enough pledges to assure success.

Secretary Herman Hormel will be a candidate to succeed himself. He will be opposed by James D. Henderson, the present vice president of the committee. The latter will have the support of the Ward 20 organization of which he is secretary, of ex-Senator Frank Mayberry and dele gates who are opposed to Hormel.

Long Hours at Museum.

Beginning to-morrow, the new Museum of Fine Arts will remain open afternoons until 4:30 o'clock. The directors promise that just as soon as the lengthening days warrant they will change this hour to 5 o'clock. Beginning with one week from to-day the museum will not be open on Sundays until 1 o'clock.

GOOD-BY, OLD '23'; IT'S JUST '22' NOW

The twenty-second day of the month seems to be one of special importance in the life of Mrs. Lucy Hall of Hyde Park. For yesterday, the twenty-second day of January, Mrs. Hall filed a divorce libel with the clerk of the Superior Court in Dedham, charging her husband, Fred B. Hall, with desertion. Mrs. Hall asks the custody of their child and allowance for their support. The whereabouts of the defendant is not mentioned in the complaint.

This twenty-second day of January is also the tenth birthday of the child, Fred C. Hall. On the twenty-second day of August, 1895, Lucy Barney and Fred A. Hall, both of Hyde Park, were married in Boston. According to her complaint they lived together until the twenty-second day of June, 1904.

Solid Gold Ring,

THE CURLEY-KELIHER FIGHT WAS A DRAW BUT IT WAS LIVELY

Washington street with three men who had robbed a friend in a card game.

Mr. Curley, though of lighter weight, is some goer, too, with his mitts. He was born and raised in Roxbury, in Ward 17, was Curley, where infants go to sleep at night in their cribs (with their feet doubled up). You remember, too, don't you, that a Roxbury boy was, and is yet, the country's pugilistic idol? (You know, I mean, both on form and in quality the Keliher-Curley mill was a corker while it lasted.

Now Here's How It Was.

Both the Kelihers went to the Parker House before Curley. They were standing at the bar drinking, so witnesses say, when Alderman Curley passed down Tremont street. One of them saw him and tapped on the window, beckoning him inside. Curley shook his head and passed on, but a few minutes later encountered Mr. Weeks, who was an unsuccessful candidate at the last election for city council on the same ticket with Curley.

Then came the explosion and mix-up. "Big Bill," so every spectator says, rushed the length of the room and struck the alderman in the back. Keliher also attempted to get in the mill, but Curley warded off "Big Bill" and sent him to the floor. Curley seemed to be just warming up.

Then the unidentified peacemaker oozed into the picture.

"Let's have fair play, gentlemen," he cried.

But! And the peacemaker went down with a grunt. Whether he was hit by one of the fighters or the force of a blow by mistake by one of the swarm of barkeeps, waiters and porters who were pouring into the room is not on record. But, be it all right, he went down and hard. Then, in the next few fast furious seconds he crossed from view.

By this time Curley was just going good. He threw out a wallop to Tom Keliher, and was about to turn his attention again to "Big Bill" when the Parker House Blue Jacket Guards for the Peace marched in. Then I was all off.

Peace Brigade Try a Wedge.

The Peace Propagators planned a drive wedge and split apart the Kelihers and Curleys. Next they shooed everybody out of the place who wasn't actively engaged in purchasing a drink, and the incident was closed.

"My version is at the end of the bar where Curley and his friends were," said a bartender last night. "Curley and Tom Keliher rushed down with Tom Keliher and he said something about hitting somebody and then hit the alderman in the back of the neck. It was a powerful wallop. Keliher grabbed Curley by the arm and 'Big Bill' shook Curley from the back about the same time that Tom Keliher pinned his arms. Somebody shouted 'Fair play!' Curley turned, pushed 'Big Bill' and landed him to the floor. Then somebody got into the fellow that called for fair play. Curley looked down and saw 'Big Bill' as he lay on the floor and then swung out at the man who gave his name as Dennis Downey. Curley must have hit him hard. The stranger also got a good blow. The whole thing lasted only about a half a minute.

Curley was like lightning after 'Big Bill' gave him the first crack in the neck."

The alderman's version of the trouble is that he was obliged to use his fists in self-defense. He said last night: "More than twenty years since I have been obliged to defend myself by physical force, and nobody regrets the happiness of to-day more than I do myself. It was simply a case of necessity."

Alderman Curley's Version.

"I met Parker Weeks with whom I ran on the same ticket for the City Council, and was stepped into the Parker House Some Stories sympathizers were there, among them Bill Keliher. Tom Keliher, the Congressman's brother, was with him.

"Keliher must have been feeling bad over the money he personally lost on election day, as well as the money he lost for others. Even when he saw me he said: 'I suppose it's up to me, Curley, to publicly chastise you.' He started to enter on his threat. We exchanged a few compliments and all of a sudden I felt a punishment, and then the Kelihers went down like a ton of bricks. Friends interfered and there was no further encounter.

"I do not believe that Keliher must have been offended over the way in which I used his cousin, the Congressman, in the stump. I only made a statement of fact in which I could not and would not care to the camp of the opposition. He started to enter into my sincere thin, or else he wanted to expose me to public ridicule, as a criticism. I did the only thing I could do if I had a sparkle of blood in my veins. I am physically none the worse for the set-to, but I regret decidedly that it happened, and anybody who witnessed the trouble will substantiate me when I say that I did nothing to incite it."

"Big Bill" Takes a Rest.

"Big Bill" was missing from his usual haunts last night. It is reported that he was just resting, but he was too tired to talk to sporters.

Another bar tender who was dealing 'em out when the motion started, gives this version of the fight:

"Two gentlemen were at my end of the bar about half past one this afternoon when Alderman Curley passed by going down School street. One of them looked on the big window then and beckoned to Curley to come in. Curley shook his head and passed on. Then I saw all of something, which of course couldn't be heard here inside. But in a minute or so I came to it. He stood at the end of the bar nearest to Washington street talking to his two friends and with his back towards Tremont street. Bill Keliher and Tom Keliher were up at the Tremont street end of the bar. My station is at the end of the bar where the friends of Alderman Curley were. The big guy they call him, rushed down with Tom Keliher and he said something about hitting somebody and then hit the alderman in the back of the neck. It was a powerful wallop. Keliher grabbed Curley by the arm and 'Big Bill' shook Curley from the back about the same time that Tom Keliher pinned his arms. Somebody shouted 'Fair play!' Curley turned, pushed 'Big Bill' and landed him to the floor. Then somebody got into the fellow that called for fair play. Curley looked down and saw 'Big Bill' as he lay on the floor and then swung out at the man who gave his name as Dennis Downey. Curley must have hit him hard. The stranger also got a good blow. The whole thing lasted only about a half a minute.

"Curley turned, caught 'Big Bill' as he landed him to the floor. Then somebody rushed into the fellow that yelled for fair play. Curley looked for a moment at 'Big Bill' on the floor and then swung at Tom Keliher. They mixed it for a minute or two. Curley must have hit him hard. The stranger also got a good blow. The whole thing lasted only about half a minute. Curley was like lightning after 'Big Bill' gave him the first crack in the neck."

JOHN L. SULLIVAN SIGNS UP WITH CUPID

Famous Fighter Waits Parson's Word to Enter Matrimonial Ring Again.

John L. Sullivan, recently a Theospian of renown and an advocate of temperance, comes to Boston to appear at the Old Howard during the week of January 31.

After his engagement, John L. intends to sail for Europe. According to report, he will not sail alone. He is suspected of having matrimonial intentions and is said to have engaged the bridal stateroom on the Ivernia for February 8.

John L. was granted a divorce from his wife about a year ago. He alleged that she deserted him twenty-five years ago. Then he is free to marry again, and his friends whisper that he has arranged to do it. The big fellow has been secretive and the name of the bride-to-be is not positively known. One story is that she is the widow of a Utica hotel keeper and another that she is a Roxbury spinster whom he has known many years.

In any event his friends are planning a monster reception on his departure for the Old World and some of the best talent in the boxing and theatrical world will take part.

From Springfield comes the report that Jake Kilrain will also sail for Europe at the same time as John L. He plans to spend a year and a half in Europe.

John L. Sullivan is playing at Akron, O. A despatch from there late last night said that Sullivan, when asked if he was going to get married, refused to admit it.

Ice Crop Imperilled.

LOWELL, Jan. 22.—The rainfall within the last twenty-four hours has caused the Merrimack river to rise four feet at this point, and if it rises six inches more water will flow over the Pawtucket dam and destroy the ice on the river above, which is just being harvested.

BREAD COMBINE AT WORK WITH WEEK

BALTIMORE, Md., Jan. 22.—Within the next week half a dozen or more of the leading bakers will have consolidated into a great supply pool which will be operated for the benefit of all concerned in an effort to minimize the breadmakers' expenses and also build up the local consumption of bakers' products.

This bread combine has been hanging fire for several months—ever since Max Oscher of St. Louis, an expert in forming similar combines throughout the West, visited Baltimore and New York. In New York the plan to combine a number of larger bakers is said to have failed but locally the movement has been proceeding slowly but surely, so that at present all but the fine details have been arranged.

BAD MAN WITH PISTOL.

Waves It in Billiard Room and Plugs a Bystander.

Ulysses S. Green, a negro, living at No. 64 endall street, Roxbury was locked up late last night at the Roxbury Crossing Police station for disturbing a crowd in the pool room at No. 4 Northfield street, and wounding Allen J. Hall of No. 39 Sawyer street in the hand as the accidental discharge of the weapon.

Evidently the negro was not used to carrying a pistol for he handled it carelessly even when the business end was pointed at his friends. Hall was sent home after his hand had received medical attention.

Malden Cannery Afire.

A fire that threatened serious damage in the Edgeworth Canning Co.'s factory, 50 Belden Bros. in Commercial street, Malden, was quickly checked by the Malden Fire Department last night. The fire was confined to the third floor, where it started.

Here's Joe Maynard's Tale of a Stolen Safe; There's Nothing In It

Burglars Stung By Democratic City Committee's Loot; Only Unpaid Bills There.

Before the Democratic City Committee gets down to real political work it has a mystery to solve.

Some time between 5 P. M. Friday and 9 A. M. yesterday the safe which has been a fixture in the Democratic City Committee rooms for many years, and which has held nearly everything but real money, disappeared.

It was there when President "Joe" Maynard left the office on Friday afternoon after Miss Mary Meyers, the executive clerk of the committee for the last twenty years, had given her notice to quit, but it was not there when he arrived on the job yesterday morning.

The odd thing about the disappearance is that the safe contained nothing but a number of faded unpaid bills, relics of past campaigns, and if some midnight prowler succeeded in entering Rooms 1107-1109 of the Old Colony Building carrying it away for its contents he will be badly "stung."

Miss Meyers, who has been employed with the committee for twenty years, would say her services "were dispensed with," the only reason advanced by the powers that be for her failure to remain with the committee.

It is Dale Intention to relocate the offices of the committee in smaller quarters and the removal will take place within a few days.

A clerk will be hired to take the place of Miss Meyers and President Maynard will have regular office hours from noon until 2 p. m. daily.

Policeman Beaten Up.

WORCESTER, Jan. 22.—Patrolman John H. Lagassey was beaten into insensibility on a public street today by Albert Charron, a brakeman living at No. 60 Wall street. It is believed that beating is the result of an old grudge held by Charron against the policeman. Lagassey appeared and placed Charron in the police court some time ago.

TERRIFIC QUAKE SHAKES ICELAND

There was a big shake-up somewhere on this old earth's crust between 5.53 A. M. and 7 A. M. yesterday. A clear, well-defined record of the terrestrial disturbance was recorded at the Harvard seismographic station. It was the most severe shock since that of April last year. The extent of the earth quivers was enormous, as both needles with the unusual lateral swing of six inches were shaken. If the recording drum-a most extraordinary magnification. The experts think the quake was at least 2,800 miles distant. It was later learned that the shock was in Iceland.

PREPARE LOMBARD TRIAL.

Hearing in Framingham Case Scheduled This Week.

Preparatory to the trial of Former Treasurer John R. Leonard of the town of Framingham, which is scheduled to begin this week, Town Counsel Sidney A. Phillips and Leonard were closeted with Assistant Attorney Higgins of Middlesex County nearly an hour yesterday. Leonard is accused of embezzling more than $32,000 of the town's money by his bonding company during his term as treasurer.

The trial of George S. Cummings, who is charged with having aided and abetted in the sale of the notes which Leonard is accused of stealing, is scheduled to take place with that of Leonard, but it is expected that both will be postponed.

President Faunce to Speak.

Several college presidents and other educators, among them President Faunce of Brown University, President MacIntyre of Smith and Superintendent Brooks of the Boston schools, are to be guests of the Boston Hood and Shoe Club at its annual ladies' night at the Hotel Somerset on Wednesday night. The Harvard Musical Club, which has been combined with Burke's Orchestra will furnish music to play up the evening. The subject of the address selected by President Faunce will be "The Place of the Individual in American Life."

CANNON DEFIES NEW ENGLAND MEN

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—It became known to-day that Speaker Cannon came near precipitating a riot at the dinner last night tendered by Chairman W. A. McKinley of the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee, to his associates. At the same time "Uncle Joe" made a positive assertion that he would return to the next Congress and had intimated that he would be a candidate to succeed himself as speaker. Consequently there is gloom in the Republican camp.

The trouble was brought about by the announcement of Representative Foster of Vermont, a member of the congressional campaign committee, that he could not be for reelection if he did not come out in open opposition to Cannon and declare he would not again vote for Cannon for Speaker. The announcement came as a surprise to members of the committee, who had no knowledge that anti-Cannon sentiment had worked itself up in Vermont.

Speaker Cannon was not present when Representative Foster declared himself. He came in later with Vice-President Sherman. Someone told the Speaker of the Foster declaration. In anger, the Speaker turned on Foster, who had been one of the staunchest organization men, and made a bitter speech denouncing his critics. During this speech the Speaker uttered his defiance of his enemies.

Senator Bakeley of Connecticut interjected the remark that Mr. Foster might speak for Vermont, but he could not speak for New England. It was noticed that hostility to Cannon did not exist in all the States of that section.

After Speaker Cannon had taken his departure there was a general canvass of the political situation from a Republican standpoint. All the members of the committee realized that Cannonism would be an issue but it was determined to make the fight as strong as possible, and to play up the return of prosperity, the repeals of the tariff law and the progressive policies of President Taft.

$2,000 PIPE SMOKE IMPERILS 5 LIVES

It cost Robert Baker just $2,000 to smoke his pipe while he unpacked some furniture in his home at No. 23 Hurlburt street, North Cambridge, last night. At the same time it almost cost him his life and endangered the lives of his wife, her mother and two other women in the house.

Baker was smoking in the cellar of his home while he was unpacking some goods packed in excelsior. A spark fell into the excelsior and started a blaze. While he was trying to put this out some bottles of cleaning fluid near by exploded. He escaped without being burned and rushed upstairs to warn the women.

All hands started for the second floor to take out the valuables and when they got there the gas lights went out. A panic followed and the women became hysterical. Baker finally succeeded in taking out his wife, Mary Daly, her mother, Miss McGowan, a visitor from New York, and the maid.

The fire burned its way through to the second floor and did about $2,000 damage.

CHELSEA SHOT UP A LA WILD WEST

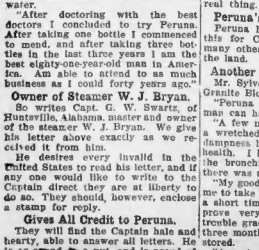
Chelsea was shot up in true wild west style about 10 o'clock last night by a man who gave his name as John Jaweva, twenty-three years old, of No. 20 Cherry street. When arraigned in Police Lieut. Parsons, after dashing down Broadway with a smoking revolver in his hand, he was locked up on the charge of carrying dangerous weapons.

The first heard from the man was when a shot was heard in the tenement street by four boys. They saw the man rushing down the street and gave chase. The man dashed into Chelsea square which was crowded with Saturday night shoppers, the gun was still smoking. The crowd immediately gave chase and he was caught in a doorway at No. 113 Broadway.

Patrolman Hussey Dead.

Patrolman George C. Hussey of Chelsea, for three years police clerk and private secretary to Chief Shannon, died yesterday at his home No. 14 Cottage street. He was a G. A. R. veteran. He is survived by a widow and three sons.

CAPTAIN SWARTZ' CASE HIS LIFE IN DESPAIR PERUNA'S GREAT VICTORY.



Was a Wreck.

"Four years ago I was a total wreck. My friends did not think I ever could pull through. Was weak, dizzy-headed. Everything passed through me as water.

"After doctoring with the best doctors I concluded to try Peruna. After using one bottle I commenced to mend, and after taking three bottles in the last three years I am the best eighty-one-year-old man in America. Am able to attend to my own business as I could forty years ago."

Owner of Steamer W. J. Bryan.

So writes Capt. G. W. Swartz, of Huntsville, Alabama, master and owner of the steamer W. J. Bryan. We give his letter above exactly as we received it from him.

He desires every invalid in the United States to read his letter, and if any one would like to write to the Captain direct they are at liberty to do so. They should, however, enclose a stamp for reply.

Gives All Credit to Peruna.

They will find the Captain hale and hearty, able to answer all letters. He is as sound as a nut, and is proud of it. He owes his restoration to health to Peruna. He wants everybody in the wide world to know it. Just write him and see if some of his health vibrations won't convince you that he has found the real thing.

Peruna's Victory Everywhere.

Peruna has not only accomplished this for Capt. Swartz, but a great many other chronic invalids all over the land.

Another Remarkable Recovery.

Mr. Sylvester E. Smith, Room 218, Granite Block, St. Louis, Mo., writes: "Peruna was the best friend a sick man can have.

"A few months ago I came here in a wretched condition. Exposure and dampness had ruined my once robust health. I had catarrhal affections of the bronchial tubes, and for a time there was a doubt as to my recovery.

"My good honest old doctor advised me to take Peruna, which I did, and in a short time my health began to improve very rapidly. The bronchial trouble gradually disappeared, and in three months my health was fully restored.

"Accept a grateful man's thanks for his restoration to perfect health."

MAN MOST FEARED BY CZAR POINTS NEED OF BOMBS

Burtzeff Doesn't Preach Violence, but Says It Is Inevitable.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Dvorianin Vladimir Burtzeff is his name. He is a Russian revolutionist, the man who, beyond all others, is feared by the Russian Czar and his police.

He is rather tall, slender, blonde here of Balzac, a man with mild nearsighted blue eyes, a molasses-colored mustache and goatee, a certain stamp of scholar and ethereal nobleness of manner. He is a guest of Dr. Kaplan, No. 250 East Broadway.

"What do you think of bombs as revolutionary documents?" he was asked.

And in a deprecating, pleasing voice that was subdued even than his manner, Mr. Burtzeff answered: "I am sorry that question properly. I must differentiate between myself as a revolutionist and as a student of history. As the former I deprecate violence; as the latter I recognize its necessity, its inevitableness. I do not preach it.

Despots and Assassins.

"The Russian Government has been described as despotism, tempered by assassination. Where can be such despotism without assassinations and politically there is seldom assassination without despotism.

"Undoubtedly bombs have accomplished things in Russia; possibly they will yet accomplish more. But I do not favor them. If all the revolutionary party in Russia would unite we would have a constitution in two years.

"The Czar," added the revolutionist, with the velvet voice, "is a moral, intelligent individual. There is a general idea that he is merely the puppet of his ministers. Nothing could be more untrue.

"The Czar is not a fool, not a weak-minded tool, as he has been portrayed. He is simply a man of ordinary mental endowment, whose moral balance has been destroyed by the possession of absolute power.

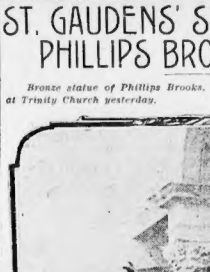
Women to Get Votes.

"You say he is surrounded by mysteries and spiritualists. That is true. But such beliefs are not inconsistent with the possession of ordinary faculties or even of statesmanship sense. W. T. Stead is a spiritualist. Do you know him?

"Women are as much interested in the Russian revolutionary movement, as the vote, as capable as men. Besides, the struggle of a constitutional government, would mean the almost absolute enfranchisement of woman."

ST. GAUDENS' STATUE OF PHILLIPS BROOKS UNVEILED

Bronze statue of Phillips Brooks, photographed just after its unveiling at Trinity Church yesterday.



STANDING in the rain, with bared heads, Boston's best known and most distinguished citizens yesterday witnessed the unveiling of the St. Gaudens bronze memorial to Phillips Brooks, on the lawn of Trinity Church, in Copley square.

There was no ceremony attending the actual unveiling, for in Trinity for an hour previous a vast congregation had assisted at a most impressive memorial service to the great preacher.

When the bell of the tower was revealed an imposing group. Beneath a beautiful granite canopy stood a heroic figure of Bishop Brooks. His left form rested upon a stand whereon was placed an open Bible. His right arm was raised and the fore and middle fingers pointed heavenward. Upon his head he wore a bishop's cap and veiled figure typifying the Christ, whose right hand rested upon the shoulder of the speaker, inspiring him. Back of the two remarkable figures rose a plain bronze cross.

Ceremony in the Church.

The choir of Trinity in its robes stood beneath the sheltered colonnades of the church and sang a hymn. Dr. Alexander Mann, the rector, Henry L. Higginson, Dr. Eliot and others were grouped at the left of the statue and the congregation from the church filed past the statue along the sidewalk reading as they passed the inscription on the pedestal. It reads:

> Phillips Brooks, preacher of the Word of God.
> Born in Boston, 1835; died in Boston, 1893.
> This monument is erected by his fellow citizens.

At 2:30 the ceremony in Trinity Church began. There was a prayer by Bishop Lawrence, an address of presentation by Henry L. Higginson on behalf of the citizens' committee, a speech of acceptance by Dr. Mann, benediction, and music by a trained choir all day.

Praised by Higginson.

Major Higginson said, in part:

"Brooks took a prominent part in the events leading up to the Civil War, hauling out strongly in his church in Philadelphia, where he served ten years. He never flinched, despite the indifference and even opposition of many of his subscribers.

"Phillips Brooks never forgot his duties as a citizen. He never would condone dishonesty or greed of office in our bosses. He never hesitated to speak fearlessly the right words—to champion the righteous course—and, therefore, it was that we hailed him as a great citizen. Can there be a nobler name?

"When he took up his work in Boston, he made his parish great in spirit and in power. He welcomed alike the saint and the sinner. He was a matchless preacher.

"It is a happy day for a people when it feels keenly the absence of a noble friend and mourns him as a genuine Phillips Brooks."

Brooks' Relatives Present.

In the body of the church sat the relatives of Bishop Brooks. They included Mrs. John Cotton Brooks, widow of the rector of Christ Church, Springfield, and her daughter, Miss Brooks; the Rev. James C. Brooks, nephew of Grace Church Rector; the Misses Franks, Miss Harriette Brooks, the Rev. and Mrs. Max Kellner, the latter the widow of the Rev. Arthur Brooks, D. D.; the Rev. and Mrs. E. S. Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. William Endicott and the Misses Brooks.

Sitting near the Brooks family were Mrs. Augustus St. Gaudens, widow of the sculptor, and her son, Howard St. Gaudens, and C. O. Brewster, representing Mekim, Mead & White, which firm designed the canopy.

Harvard classmates of Bishop Brooks, who sat together, included Edwin H. Abbot, Lewis Angier, Charles Chase, George Dexter, William P. R. Longfellow, Benjamin S. Rotch, Richard Richards, William W. Richards, Frank R. Sanford, George C. Sawyer, Henry Waller, Henry F. Walters.

New York Taxes Sworn Off.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—New York city's assessment of a billion and a quarter dollars, levied on personal property, has dwindled to less than a billion, although the books have been open for swearing off assessments. Of this class less than two weeks, Mrs. Emma B. Kennedy, who was assessed at $6,000,000, swore the amount off entirely to-day.

MEAT TRUST A GOOD THING FOR PUBLIC, SAYS ARMOUR

"Co-operation Among Packers Helps Everybody," Says Head of Combine.

CHICAGO, Jan. 22.—The beef barons of Chicago are manifestly disturbed by the war on meat prices and the Federal action to jail the trust leaders.

J. Ogden Armour said to-day:

"I am not inclined to discuss the situation. Nothing is to be gained by talking now."

"What causes the present high price of meat? Do you think it is too high?" he was asked.

"Yes, I am satisfied that the price of meat to the consumer is too high, but this is caused by a variety of conditions. Chief of these conditions is the fact that the price of stock and the beef paid by the packers, is too high. Not in years have we paid so much for stock as now. There are many other conditions which are not to be controlled by the meat operators."

Mr. Armour, is there a beef trust?" he was asked.

"The head of the "Beef Trust" smiled.

"I am not on the witness stand," he replied.

"In view of what I have read in the newspapers of the Government's attitude this is no time for me to talk. I will say, however, that such co-operation as there may be among the packers is a benefit to the public rather than the reverse."

"Are you going to hold a meeting at once?"

"I don't know. I suppose I shall talk things over with my associates."

Thomas Cunniff, secretary to the Government's action, Louis F. Swift was willing to discuss the price of beef.

"The reason for the high price of beef is that the farmers are getting a higher price for their grain," said he.

"Instead of feeding their grain to stock they sell the grain to a very large extent, thus diminishing the supply of stock of all kinds.

"A great many people and a great many newspapers make mistake in comparing figures on the cost of meat, they figure on porterhouse steak as a basis of comparison. This is absurdly wrong.

"The steak and choice cuts comprise only 26 per cent. of the beef. The basis of comparison should be on the 74 per cent. of the less choice cuts.

"People ought to buy the cheaper portions of the beef. If property cooked they are delicious. The tireless cooker is doing a great thing for the housewife of to-day. By its use she can make cheap meat palatable. Every housewife ought to have a tireless cooker."

RAFFLE COUNCIL CHAIR.

Timothy L. Connolly, former president of the Common Council, announces that future ownership of the chair and desk occupied by presiding officers of that body be decided by drawing by lot at the last surviving presidents take part. He says if he wins he will give the furniture to the Finance Commission. "I will do this," said Connolly, "to remind the commission of the work it did in sending one of the men who occupied the chair to Deer Island."

Councilman Keiley of Ward 13 has offered an order calling for an equal distribution of the furniture in the Common Council chamber among the members. The body is abolished when the Fitzgerald administration is sworn in and the new charter goes into effect.

BABIES' TEARS PRODUCE GREAT SINGERS; LET THEM CRY, URGES STANLEY HALL

MOTHERS, do you desire to make a Melba or an Eames out of your baby girl, or a Caruso or Constantino out of your baby boy? Then let them cry! Don't try to hush them, for it will do them good and they need the vocal development.

That's the advice of Dr. G. Stanley Hall, president of Clark University, given in an address before the Metaphysical Club in Huntington Chambers, discussing the topic, "The new movement in the study of children and child literature." President Hall says to let the child cry, not to carry the church club so far as to make the boys ladylike, and to keep the youngster from money madness.

Making Frogs To Order.

"Let nature take its course," said President Hall. "Some years ago certain French scientists believed that frogs could be raised without passing through the tadpole period. They cut off the tails of the tadpoles with the result that, while the frogs lived, they had no legs.

"The child must evolve, and every fundamental tendency needs development. For example take the cry of the baby, and much is prevented, a most vital point in the development of the child.

"Take another example, creeping. This is a rudimentary function, for the child gets its natural exercise, in creeping. It is forced to throw back its shoulders; it develops the muscles of the arms and strengthens its neck muscles, thus helping it, when it is strong enough to walk, to hold up its head.

Neglecting Children Here.

"Thus must the evolution of the child be natural and aided. Too many of us feel or believe that a child is a human being. It is not. A child is simply a candidate for manhood and must be treated as such.

"The child must be considered as farther advanced than the man, for it must be remembered that in the child are traits which have come down through the ages, building and being builded with each step.

"In America there is a surprising tendency to neglect the needs of children. Compare what we have to offer children in the way of toys with what can be found in Germany. There, where the toys are modeled after the mechanical inventions of man, the child has an early and natural opportunity to think for itself.

"Because we can train children to do things supporting, as it were, we feel we are accomplishing something. But take for example Counsel, the monkey appearing in vaudeville. He has been educated as 'more man than monkey and who increases himself, acts at a table as a person, rides a bicycle and so forth.

"This is the mechanical invention of many persons. For the monkey shows no intelligence. He is merely mechanically trained, and without doubt would show his delight in style of his dress suit and get back into the freedom of his native jungle.

Child's Soul a Puzzle.

"And neither should the child be mechanically trained, for to get the best results the child should develop wisdom naturally. If we force children, immunity results.

"It is hard, almost impossible, to understand the soul of a child. It is the world's greatest secret, something we cannot solve.

"Without question, the soul of man is as old as the body and has been as steadily developed. It has been said that nine tenths of the animal life of the world has been lost. So it must be conceded that nine tenths of the soul life, inasmuch as it existed or was developed, has been lost.

"Like the eight-ninths of an iceberg which is submerged, so is the soul of a child submerged, while but a small part is conscious.

"We notice signs, psychological and so forth, such as dreams, for what they appear to be. For, as in the case of the monkey, we are too susceptible, mistaking, overestimating and misinterpreting the automatic responses of mediums and others for the spiritual.

Learning from the Gang.

"But through the new movement in child life we are rapidly developed. Take for example the club of boys which is taking the place of gangs, and successfully. The gang is a natural organization with leader and lieutenants. In all of the greater cities are gangs, but with the coming of the organized club founded on the basic principles of the gang, much good is being accomplished.

"In many clubs this has been carried too far, the boys in many instances having become far too indulgent and oversolicitous.

"Then there is the brotherhood movement, the following after the old Greek belief that every boy should have a grown man as a mentor and sponsor. This organization is taking many children from orphanages and putting them into good homes with pleasing results.

"The Sunday schools are being improved, under the plan of having properly trained teachers. The playgrounds which are being set aside for children are of wonderful assistance in their development, giving them plenty of healthful exercise and getting them back a little closer to nature.

Nation's Hope in the Child.

"The social settlements, story tellers organization, clubs and societies for the rescue or aid of girls and the clean and moral theatre for the young are all important to the better life of men through the child.

"The spirit of youth, the zest, enthusiasm, and natural craving of the young is the most precious thing in the world, and if we can but preserve these elements, then there will be found enough virtue to save the nation. The true interests of heredity must be employed in the saving of the world from existing conditions."

WEDS AT 17; BRIDE 18.

Young People Engaged Two Years Marry at Brockton.

BROCKTON, Jan. 22.—A seventeen-year-old boy became the husband of an eighteen-year-old girl in Brockton at 8:30 to-night through the consent of parents of both parties and permission of the Probate Court.

The bridegroom is Freeland H. French, Jr., son of Freeland H. French of No. 31 Galen street. The bride is Miss Estelle Nelson of No. 1 Plymouth street. The Rev. Dr. Julien S. Wadsworth married them at the home of the groom's parents. They have been engaged two years.

JELLIES IN PANTRY LURE BOY BURGLAR

Eleven-Year-Old Caught Entering House Has Taste for Sweets.

Psychologists and criminologists are deeply interested in the study of little eleven-year-old "Jimmie" Geagan, who was held as a burglar in the Newton police court for a continued hearing, charged with entering the home of Mrs. David Farquhar of No. 130 Woodland road, Auburndale. Charges of forging and uttering two worthless checks are also hanging over "Jimmie's" head, and still he is stolid and strident. He is the son of Patrick Geagan, an Auburndale coachman.

"Jimmie" was arrested as he was about to turn a key and enter the Farquhar residence. Policeman Richard Goode, who had been detailed to solve the mysterious disappearance of delicacies from the pantry and cupboard.

"Jimmie" had access to the Farquhar house. He did errands for Mrs. Farquhar now and then. He came to be familiar with the Kitchen and incidentally the cupboard, were the jams and jellies were stored. Apparently "Jimmie" is a little "Jimmie" downfall.

Francis P. Farquhar, Harvard graduate and son of Mrs. Farquhar, explained in court yesterday the mystery of the two checks that "Jimmie" is charged with forging at the office of a West Newton coal dealer. Both were drawn on the Cambridge Trust Company.

Young Farquhar testified that when he graduated from Harvard last year he closed his account and threw the bank checks into one of the waste baskets.

The first check that "Jimmie" had cashed in West Newton was for $12 and was drawn under a fictitious name on the Cambridge institution. He got the money on the first check. Then he tried again and he was arrested.

Manfred Maxim, instructor in the Newton high school, declared that the writing on the checks was "Jimmie's."

31 DEAD; HOMES LOST IN FLOODS IN FRANCE

PARIS, Jan. 23.—Thirty-one deaths have already been recorded in the flooded sections of France. This number is probably far below the total, as there is but meagre communication with several of the cities that have suffered the greatest damage.

The rains have ceased, but the rivers continue to rise and spread havoc throughout eastern and southern France. It was feared at one time lower that the Eiffel Tower might be undermined.

The Chablis wine growers have suffered heavy loss. Nearly all their wine cellars have been flooded.

Intense cold has followed the rains and there is much suffering among the hundreds of refugees who have been deprived of clothing and shelter by the destruction of their homes. The government is sending all the available supplies of food and tents.

Y. M. C. A. ACTIVITY.

New Temporary Headquarters Ready in Two Weeks.

The temporary quarters for the Boston Young Men's Christian Association at Nos. 2, 3 and 10 Ashburton place will be ready in two weeks.

In the meantime work of the association will be carried on in the rooms which were placed at the disposal of the association in the Young Men's Christian Union building, immediately after the fire which destroyed the Y. M. C. A. headquarters.

COURT HOLDS THREE FOR FATAL FIGHT

Daniel F. Desmond died yesterday in the City Hospital from knife wounds and a beating he received at No. 5 Ransom court in the home of Dominico Cirbiano. Jealousy is said to have caused the trouble. Christoforo, Pasquale Cirello, Rafael Cenniff and Achilla Duca were committed in default of $5,000 bail, charged with manslaughter in the case.

Ida Musa and Abina Daley were held as witnesses. The two women say they went to the Christoforo home with Desmond after he had finished his day's work as a bartender in a saloon at Merrimac and Staniford streets. They were all talking to Mrs. Christoforo when the husband came in greatly enraged, and ran out again. Five minutes later he returned with the other men, and a fight began. Desmond fought like a wild man, but in front of No. 59 Chatham street, covered with blood and with six knife thrusts, he SHOE MEN ANXIOUS.

Exporters Fear Tariff Reprisals By Germany.

Exporters of boots and shoes in Germany are exercised over the possibility of tariff reprisals between that country and the United States. The new schedule of duties agreed on by the German authority provides for a material increase in the rates on shoes, and in consideration of a cablegram received by the New England Shoe and Leather Association last Friday the association has urged the New England Representatives and Senators at Washington to do everything in their power to have Germany adjust the tariff.

ASKS HOME RULE IN BOSTON LICENSES AND POLICE

Callahan Bill Gives Mayor the Naming of Board and also the Commissioner.

URGES BENEFIT OF PLAN

"Civil Service Board Will Insist on Having Experts," Declares Author.

HOLDING that the time has come for a change, Representative Timothy E. Callahan of Ward 9 introduced into the Legislature yesterday a bill providing for the appointment of the Boston Licensing Board and the Police Commissioner by the Mayor of Boston. These officials are now named by the Governor.

Representative Callahan does not call for the removal of License Commissioners Baker, Emery and Hudson. He does not ask that Police Commissioner O'Meara be reinstated out of office. Each is to complete his unexpired term.

"I am after nobody's scalp," Mr. Callahan said last night. "The proposition is plain. If the Mayor of Boston can be trusted with the appointments given to him under the charter amendments, he can be trusted to pick these other officials.

"In each instance I have taken care to provide that the appointees must be certified by the State Civil Service Commissioners. That is beneficial to be the rule as to every other important choice by the Mayor of Boston. It ought to work out just as well with the police commissioner and the licensing board. The Civil Service Commission will insist that these, as in the other cases, that the appointee is an acknowledged expert.

"We of Boston read of the attitude of Mayor Gaynor of New York, with reference to police brutality, misrule and inefficiency and so on, and we clap our hands gleefully and say, 'What an excellent system that is for New York.' Why wouldn't it be an excellent system for Boston? Has the Republican party suffered in any noticeable degree by State rule for Boston?

"I move for a greater degree of Home Rule for Boston. The dominant party last year took away a great deal from us. The dominant party provided that the Mayor alone shall have a check on all the first grade appointments of our Mayor. I respectfully ask the dominant party to meet us half way. I ask that the head of our police department, and the members of the licensing board, all four of whom are named now by the governor of Massachusetts, may instead be named by the Mayor of Boston and continue, as you might say, at the pleasure of both boards—mandamus, a republican body, council and through.

"And I anticipate, and I shall maintain, that no reasonable objection can be raised against my suggestion. Mind I say no unreasonable objection. That will be settled by the courts. But no unreasonable objection will be raised."

SOUTH BOSTON MAN NAMED SECRETARY TO MAYOR-ELECT

WILLIAM LEAHY

Photograph by Conlin.

Mr. Leahy, chosen as his secretary by the Mayor-elect, has been a close friend of Mr. Fitzgerald from boyhood. His position will be one of great responsibility, for besides his important duties as secretary, he will be called upon to represent the Mayor at many public affairs.

NO RATS AT MARSTON'S.

Curls and Puffs No Longer Adorn the Fair Waitresses.

There wasn't a rat in sight yesterday in Marston's restaurant on Summer street. And there were no puffs either except the usual puff about cakes.

All the pretty waitresses—they are all pretty in Marston's—had thrown away their rats and puffs and curls. Well, they just had to, for the waitresses never did like rats and puffs and curls, and she might say all of the girls kept on their force out their beloved cuts, and threw away their curls and puffs.

"It's a crime," said one blonde, "that we can't even keep our hair right down. Just see how they're crushing the beef trust! Two cents now cost only 99 cents and rats ain't worth nothing."

LONG CHEERS FOR PEARY.

Six Minutes of Shouting for Explorer at Dinner.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Commander Robert E. Peary was cheered for six minutes this evening at a dinner of the alumni of the College of the City of New York, which was given in honor of General Alexander S. Webb at the Hotel Astor. In speaking about the North Pole, Peary remarked: "Now they will be called to the 'frozen hotel.' The name of Dr. Cook was not mentioned.

ANNA SCHUMACHER'S DEATH SOLVED BY CONFESSION?

Navy Man Arrested at Portsmouth Said to Have Admitted Rochester Killing.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Jan. 22.—James Hall, an enlisted man in the United States navy, is under arrest in this city, is reported to have confessed to the killing of Anna Schumacher in a cemetery in Rochester, N. Y., last August.

Hall's confession appears to be the solution of a mystery which has baffled the police of not only Rochester but every city in the United States since the body of the seventeen-year-old girl was found in the cemetery, where she had gone to place flowers on her father's grave.

It was on August 9 that men passing through the cemetery saw tracks in the soil which aroused their suspicions. Upon the dragging of a body in such a manner that heel marks showed in the earth.

These tracks were traced to a new made grave, and there was found the body of the girl. Marks showing she had been choked and beaten were found on the throat, neck, face and body.

For months the clews were unearthed, but always led to nowhere. Many were suspected of the crime and arrested, but all were released because of insufficient evidence. The brothers, sisters and friends of the girl aided the police in every conceivable way, but up today no trace of the murderer was found. The arrest of Hall is reported confession to the police is the first evident solution of the mystery.

It was shown that the man here fought desperately for the safeguarding of her honor and her life when she was attacked, previous to going to the grave of her father in the High Sepulchre Cemetery, where she was afterward buried.

Hall is said to have dug the murderer with a shovel stolen from a barn at St. Bernard's Seminary, with the result that later a player of the faculty of the school who left Rochester in about the time of the murder was sought as a suspect. The confession of Hall further proves the priest's innocence, which was later established.

The murder was most shocking and aroused the greatest excitement. Posses were organized, dogs were set on the trail and many threats of lynching were heard. But the murderer disappeared and evidence against suspects who were arrested was so slight and insufficient that they easily proved their right to freedom.

James E. Hall was arrested two months ago for deserting from one of the battleships. He was served four months of his sentence on the prison ship Southery. A petit officer of the ship was found a letter written by Hall to the police authorities of Monroe County, N. Y., in which Rochester is the county offering to give them valuable testimony to clear up the Schumacher case if the navy released from the penal prison through their efforts.

Yesterday District Attorney Howard B. Wehlener and Sheriff W. S. Gillet of Monroe County visited Hall on the prison ship with a stenographer and he talked to them for several hours.

They declined to say if he had personally implicated himself, but admitted that he had given valuable information from him. The commandant of the navy yard has advised the Washington authorities to surrender Hall to the New York officials and they are expected to leave here with him tomorrow. He is thirty years old.

Trainmen Break With New Haven

Wage Conference Ends When the Officials Refuse to Acknowledge the Rate.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—The committee of trainmen of the New Haven Railroad, who for the past week have been in New Haven in council with the officers of the road regarding the new wage scale submitted to the various railroads of the country broke off negotiations today and returned to this city.

Upon their arrival here they reported that the officials of the New Haven had refused to acknowledge the new wage scale submitted. Committees from the various lines will meet in conference here on Monday, when a full report of the negotiations that were broken off with the New Haven will be filed. Another committee of trainmen from the Erie were in conference with Vice President Stewart of the road today.

SUIT AGAINST WIFE.

Prior Wants Back Property That He Had Transferred.

Suit to recover from his wife valuable property which was transferred to her during a period when, he admits, he was addicted to the use of intoxicants, has been filed by Parron H. Prior in the Superior court. He also wants an accounting from George A. Wyer, his partner, in an estate which was left him by his father-in-law, Mrs. Prior's wife, who has separated from him since December, 1907.

Prior left him a half interest in the wholesale fish business conducted by Wyer & Prior at 10 Commercial street, real estate. This was transferred to Mrs. Prior, next as a gift, according to Prior's petition. The case is returnable in the Municipal court today.

HERE'S A RAILROAD BABY.

Born in Station as Mother Gets Off a Train.

STAMFORD, Ct., Jan. 22.—Taken ill aboard "The Bankers' Limited Express train, en route to New York this morning, Mrs. Anna Hart was carried off the train in the Stamford depot. Dr. Frederick Schlereth, who happened to be at the station at the time, introduced her to a new daughter in the ladies' waiting room and called for the ambulance. At the Stamford Hospital the mother and child were doing nicely tonight.

Mrs. Hart had been visiting friends near Bridgeport. She boarded the train at Bridgeport to go to New York to visit her cousin. She told the police that her home is in Springfield, Mass. She also has seven other children and that her husband was killed in accident in Springfield several months ago. She says she handed her purse containing $10 to a man who had assisted her on the train. The police have been unable to find the man or the purse and money as yet.

QUADRUPLETS THE LATEST.

Arithmetical Progression Marks Babies in the Wilson Family.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 22.—Quadruplets were born to Mrs. W. W. Wilson of this city last night. The quartet is in addition to the two girls and two boys now in the mother of two sets of triplets and a pair of twins. Of these children, seven, counting the new arrivals, are living.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson have caused much excitement at the addresses to their family. When the two sets of triplets were born they received several letters of congratulations from President Roosevelt. The Wilson family came from Chicago four years ago.

EARTHQUAKE JARS MAINE.

PORTLAND, Me., Jan. 22.—An earthquake shock at 8:30 this evening, central Windham corner and radiating to other nearby places made itself felt tonight.

Clothes goods were jolted from the shelves in the village stores, the female force of the Westbrook Electric Power Company's plant at North Gorham were bewildered, windows rattled in the houses and pots were shaken off the shelves and the telephone exchanges was considerably disturbed for upwards of an hour following the disturbance. It was of three seconds duration.

E. H. S. CLASS BANQUETS.

Thirty-five members of the class of 1910, English High School, gathered at the City Club last night for a banquet. Messrs. Shea, Thomas and Lehon of the school faculty were guests. Harry Kane spoke on "Mid-Year Training" and W. H. Bowden told of his trip through Europe. Albert H. Wilson acted as toastmaster.

BOSTON OPERA'S BIG NIGHT.

CHICAGO, Jan. 22.—The season of the Boston Opera Company closed here tonight in a blaze of glory. Nearly 5,000 people crowded the Auditorium to hear "Lakme," with Lucia Lapkowska in the title role, and "Faust," with George Hamlin and Mazarolle Sparo. The receipts for the evening amounted to $16,000.

Schooner Haskell Safe.

The schooner S. G. Haskell, which is aground on Bonhomme Shoal, is safe according to a wireless message received last night. The crew refused to leave the ship when she ran ashore as a result of an anchor trouble. The revenue cutter Acushnet, is standing by and there is no likelihood of danger. At high tide this morning, the revenue cutters Gresham and Acushnet and the tug Mercury will attempt to float the schooner.

BENNIE BURNS IS POLICE BOGIE MAN

Reported to Haunt South End, Though Officers Have Been on Trail for Weeks.

Bennie Burns is the bogie man of the South End police. He is wanted on a charge of the murder of his pal, Jack Horley, in an alley off Dover street two weeks ago. The police searched for him in all his haunts and reported that he had left the city.

But Bennie Burns or his ghost is walking the streets of the South End after nightfall. A man in the last stages of consumption, he said he knew definitely that he will not be taken alive. He is supposed to be in Two Cent.

His continued avoidance of arrest has convinced the South End Dover street that he lives in charmed life. All sorts of stories are afloat as to his whereabouts. He is said on a group of loafers in a saloon that he had voted for Mayor in the election days. A search of the ward 9 register shows that he is not on the voting list, and if he did vote it was on somebody else's name.

School keepers claim to have served him drinks. Restaurant keepers admit that he has come in for food. And yet when the police go after him he is not to be found.

Burns and Jack Harley quarreled about a girl and Burns fled the city, fearing a meeting with Bennie.

PRINCETON CHAMPIONS.

Nails College Ice Hockey Title, Beating Columbia.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Princeton hockeyites practically clinched the title as champions of the Intercollegiate Hockey League by sweating a victory over the Columbia seven at the Sachs rink tonight.

A lone tally suffices for the victory. The Tigers combined good work and got the stiff game of the season in order to ward off defeat. The fact that Rook, their perfect defense player, was out of condition lessened the Tigers chances for victory, but the defensive play of the entire forward line of Princeton offset this handicap.

SERVISS TELLS OF BRAND NEW COMET

Observes Celestial Body in Twilight at New York in a Golden Tint.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—At 5:30 P. M. today I caught sight of the wonderful new comet discovered last Sunday near the sun by Dr. Innes at Johannesberg, South Africa. On account of clouds it had been invisible here until this evening, although seen in California and Europe.

I had gone to the terrace overlooking the Wall Street Ferry in Brooklyn, in the hope of seeing one more stranger in the sky. A break appeared in the clouds, and astonishing as it seemed, the opening was exactly where it should have been to reveal the comet from the point where I stood. The head was brighter than an ordinary first magnitude star, and a brilliant tail streamed directly upward and disappeared in a layer of higher clouds.

The whole comet, in twilight, had a distinctly golden tint. The head was a little fuzzy and the tail appeared to the naked eye to be partially divided into two parallel streams. The portion of the tail visible in the narrow space between two banks of clouds was about four or five degrees long.

The brilliance of what was visible indicated that when observations in the absence of clouds it should exhibit a formidable length, perhaps many degrees. The comet at 5:30 o'clock was directly over Governor's Island and about twenty degrees southwest of Venus.

If the evening sky is clear tomorrow the comet unquestionably be seen in great splendor. It should be looked for at the sunset begins to fade sufficiently to make visible an hour after sunset. My first observation was hastily and poorly made, during which I scrambled the comet both with the naked eye and with a powerful opera glass. The latter simply made the phenomenon brighter without adding in the least to the information at disposal any features not seen in the first glance alone.

It may be said with certainty that this will prove to be one of the most remarkable and brilliant comets seen in a century.

FIRE IN A LAUNDRY.

Somebody in Somerville Will Be Without a Clean Shirt Today.

Fire in the boiler room of the Somerville Laundry company, a three-story wooden structure at No. 46 Glen street, Somerville, last night, caused a damage of $5,000. It was discovered by a citizen, who pulled in an alarm.

POLICE CALL CLARK CHIEF OF RUSTLERS

Arrest Follows Discovery of Cattle Corral in Newton Woods After Thefts.

An arrest on Boston Common yesterday disclosed the fact that this city is infested by a band of "rustlers," as cattle thieves are called in the West.

Twenty-four cows have been stolen from Brighton yards within a month.

Boston and Newton police followed the thieves by wagon trails into the Newton woods, where a rustlers' cave was discovered.

Letters found in a rustic build locker in the cave by one of the robbers led to the arrest of Charles Clark yesterday. The prisoner had been caught in the morning at Harrison avenue and Essex street, but had put up a desperate fight and broke away. He was taken to the Brighton station and locked up.

The police believe he is the chief of the "rustlers" who, about a month ago, began to operate in Boston. On January 12 six cows were stolen from the Brighton yards. Two men, who had been on guard at the yards the night the "rustlers" worked, were arranged, but the court believed their story that they had been drugged and let them go.

Tracks near the corral made the police believe that the thieves had taken away the cattle in big covered wagons. Milkman John O'Leary said he had seen vehicles of this kind driving through the woods in early morning. The teams were going toward Newton, he said.

Special Officer Muldoon was assigned to the case by the Brighton police and he was aided by Newton police. They researched over the tracks, and on Friday one was struck which led to a cave in a forest in Newtonville. The "rustlers" had built a rude corral there. There were four cows in it.

IN THE HISTORY OF THIS HOUSE

The most effective way to close out a stock of this class of merchandise is to cut prices to figures that will make people buy. More than half of these goods are offered at less than cost of materials. Look through the items, observe the big savings, and COME IN EARLY MONDAY, for quantities are too small in most lots to last through the day.

HOCKING CULPRITS PUNISHED FEB. 2

Stock Exchange Will Then Name Fate of Men Who Engineered Pool.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Action will be taken by the Stock Exchange on February 2, which is a week from next Wednesday, will Will Stow, secretary and counsel for the public in general be informed as to the exact punishment if any is to be meted out to those who may be held responsible to the governors of the Stock Exchange for of the manipulation of Hocking Coal and Iron stock which dumped disastrous results on Wednesday and as a result left a trail of woe and much perturbation in its wake.

A. M. Cathan, F. L. Jones and Ernest Greenleaf, the subcommittee appointed by the board of governors to investigate the matter, completed its investigation last night, but the delinquents, if any, will, under the rules of the exchange, have ten days' grace in which to present their defense. This is the same procedure as was taken in the famous matter of A. G. Brown & Co., and more recently in the case of Post & Flagler.

The subcommittee has in all human and purposes made its report to the governors. If the offenders may appear before the full board of governors and plead extenuating circumstances in mitigation of punishment.

It was generally conceded today that the persons who are directly responsible for the flooding troubles are completely without the pale of stock exchange jurisdiction, just as was the case in the Rock Island incident, and for the only manner in which these operators can be reached is by punishing the brokers who executed their orders.

C. M. L. MAY CONTINUE.

But Storrow Headquarters in Kimball Building Are Closed.

The James J. Storrow campaign headquarters followed the Storrow campaign out of existence at 5 o'clock last evening, when Jere Desmond, the headquarters handy man, locked up the doors and turned over the keys to the janitor. All of yesterday was spent in removing from the headquarters in the Kimball building to every vestige of the campaign. Literature, posters, newspapers, and the last of the tables, desks and chairs were carried away.

Rumor had it last night that the "Citizens' Municipal League would continue its activities. It is said that new headquarters may be established in the Kimball building.

BRICKLAYERS PLAN BIG UNION MERGER

Secret Amendment May Admit Plasterers Into Strong Organization.

That the Bricklayers' and Masons' International Union will try to bring the plasterers into its organization through a constitutional change made in secret session during the closing hours of its Fred Hall convention, was stated by a large number of delegates before leaving for their homes in different sections of the country late last night. The officers of the convention itself refused to make the fact public.

The amendment, it is one of the most powerful trade unions in the country. They also have a regular American Federation of Labor charter, while the bricklayers and masons always have remained apart from the Federation.

Another important constitutional change made last night was an amendment permitting the chartering of additional local unions when sanctioned by the International executive board and approved of by a vote of any convention despite the objections of existing locals.

The convention has been in continuous session in this city since January 10, and final adjournment was not taken until yesterday afternoon. The next, and forty-third convention will be held in St. Joseph, Missouri, with 75 years hence, six hundred delegates, representing 75,000 members, were in attendance here.

QUAKE SUFFERERS WIN.

Insurance Companies Must Pay $175,000 More in 'Frisco.

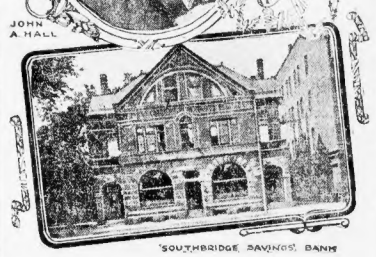
SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 22.—Fire insurance companies were given another blow today in the United States Circuit Court when a jury gave verdicts for plaintiffs holding thirteen policies, aggregating more than $175,000 for losses in the earthquake. The suits were consolidated and tried before Judge Dietrich of Idaho, who sat for Judge Van Fleet, who was disqualified.

Four weeks were spent in the trial, and nearly 3,000 witnesses examined. All the policies had an indorsement known as an earthquake clause. The jury found that fire, and not the earthquake was the proximate cause of the loss.

HUNDREDS TO JOIN HUNT FOR MISSING SOUTHBRIDGE BANKER'S BODY IN WOODS

Missing Southbridge banker, for whom police are searching, and bank building.

JOHN A. HALL



'SOUTHBRIDGE SAVINGS' BANK

President of Suspended Institution Doubts Suicide of Treasurer and Reassures Depositors.

SOUTHBRIDGE, Jan. 22.—After a search to-day by Chief of Police Jesse C. Combs, aided by a force of volunteer farmers, for John A. Hall, the missing treasurer of the Southbridge Savings Bank, the feeling grew here tonight that the man has killed himself.

Combs and his force, supplemented by hundreds of mill men, will take up the trail again to-morrow and beat the woods in the vicinity of Hall's country home and along the various roads in this part of the State for the man's body.

While a warrant was sworn out for Hall's arrest for the alleged embezzlement of $21,000, the amount of the banks loss is not yet known. An attachment was filed against Hall's property to-day for $100,000 and this would seem to indicate that the loss of the bank is expected to reach a much larger sum than the $21,000.

Hall Seen by Car Conductor.

Hall was last seen yesterday forenoon, according to Conductor William Farquhar, at Palmer. He got off a car there, saying that he intended to go to a sanitarium near there. He did not go.

President Calvin D. Paige of the bank said to-day that he had no idea where Hall is, that he hardly thought he had killed himself, that he hoped the depositors would not lose anything and that he could not tell just when the bank would resume business.

The national bank with which Hall was connected, is reported to be all right. He was treasurer of the town, and the books are being examined. It is generally believed that they will be found correct. He was also treasurer of the Young Man's Christian Association and the finances of that institution are believed safe.

President Paige went to Boston to-day and conferred with Lawyer Charles F. Choate, Jr., of No. 60 State street and Bank Commissioner Chapin. When the conference was over Commissioner Chapin gave out the following statement:

Commissioner's Statement.

"While a detailed statement cannot be made regarding the affairs of the Southbridge Savings Bank until the completion of the examination by the expert accountant, the securities have been found by the examiners in the Bank Commissioner's department, and to be worth more than their book value. The real estate loans are also in good shape.

"And in addition to the surplus the bank is pro[tected] by a bond company surety in the amount of $20,000. It is hoped that the depositors will not sustain any serious loss after a reasonable time has elapsed."

A reporter for the Sunday American talked with President Paige to-night. He was asked:

"Have you any idea where Hall is?"

"I haven't the remotest. We are making every effort to find him."

"Do you think that he has killed himself?"

"I doubt it."

Awaiting Expert's Report.

"Do you think that he has any of the lost money with him?"

"I could not say as to that."

"How much money do you think has been taken?"

"I cannot say until after the expert has finished with the books of the bank."

"Does the examination show, as far as you have gone, that the sum may reach $100,000?"

"I have nothing upon which to base any total figures, one way or the other."

"Where do you think the money went?"

"That also is a mystery. Hall certainly had no extravagant tastes. Mr. Hall was never known to speculate."

"Do you think that the depositors will lose anything?"

"They will have to have patience until the whole matter is worked out."

"When will the bank open?"

"Not until the whole examination is completed, and that will take some time."

The vast multitude that was on the bank when it was opened?"

"There will be no run on the bank. The people are not excited, and we have the complete confidence of the depositors."

Mrs. Hall at Home.

Mrs. Hall, wife of the treasurer, returned to Southbridge to-day from Boston. She went to her home, but refused to see any callers. She was said to be suffering from nervous troubles. Her parents, A. W. Morgan of Boston, was with her.

The committee held a meeting to-day in the offices of Town Counsel J. C. P. Wakefield. They appointed Edward D. Dresser treasurer in all the unexpired term of Hall, which runs until April 1, and employed Robert Campbell, an expert accountant of Boston, to make a thorough examination of the town's books.

D. L. Smith is several to the town to-day that many of the prominent business men have will be questioned as to the conduct of the bank.

GREAT HEAD HOUSE BASED ON HONESTY

'Gentlemen's Agreement' Only Contract Binding Partners in Brokerage Firm.

A "gentlemen's agreement" was the basis upon which the partners in the firm of Charles Head & Co. did business. The death of the great Boston financier and founder revealed the fact that the firm, which had millions of capital and transacted an enormous business, was organized exactly like a corner grocery store in the backwoods, upon verbal agreement.

In these days, when incorporation is usually the first act of any one embarking in any business, it is pleasing to find such a remarkable example of sterling honesty in business.

The firm did business in Boston and New York. No articles of partnership were ever drawn up. Should any of the partners desire to encroach upon the privileges of the others, there is no legal bond to restrain him.

The fact that this house rose from small beginnings to one of the most powerful influential in the land speaks well for the character of the men in the firm.

"Charles Head was a very peculiar man," said a well-known broker, speaking of the revelations. He had old-fashioned ideas of honesty and believed that men in his employ should live themselves as they would their private lives. There are a few more old-fashioned exponents of doing business in Boston to-day without partnership papers, but it is not businesslike, and none of the modern concerns could afford to work upon that basis.

James Sullivan is the Boston member of the firm of Charles Head. William G. Borland, Dexter Hugden, James S. Metcalf and Charles C. West are the New York partners. Mrs. William A. Russell and Mrs. Philip Stockton, the heirs of the estate, have applied for administration papers. The concern will continue to do business as before.

LANDLORDS' UNION WILL BOOST RENTS

BROCKTON, Jan. 22.—Brockton is to have a landlord's union. The organization will be effected next week. It has just one purpose and that purpose is not concealed. It is to raise rents on an average of two dollars a month on every tenement in the city.

The new agreement with the carpenters and other building trades unions goes into effect on the first of May, and the landlords plan to make the people pay at least their share of the added wages. To offset the possibility of removals to landlords who are not affected by the change in building cost, the union is being formed so that all rents may be raised at the same time.

SCRAMBLED FIRE ALARMS.

Funny Mix-up Caused By Streets with the Same Name.

Two streets of the same name in Newton and Watertown and one telephone exchange in Newton, in charge of an operator who works the wires allowed for calls in both localities, caused a mixup last night for the fire departments in those places.

Arlington and Bellevue streets are intersecting thoroughfares in Newton and also in Watertown. A citizen called Central at Newton, told her there was a fire in Arlington street and asked for to call fire department.

She notified the Watertown Department and the apparatus began work. Another citizen called up the Newton house. Meantime a citizen rang in an alarm from Box 1744 in Newton, which brought the members of the department in that city to a fire in the two-and-a-half story wooden dwelling house at No. 10 Arlington street, Newton, owned and occupied by John Perry, queen and family. The fire was confined to the second floor. The damage was $50.

MORGAN GIFT ACCEPTED.

Hartford to Have Municipal Building on Site He Gave.

HARTFORD, Ct., Jan. 22.—At a special meeting of the court committee, appointed to select a site for a municipal building this noon, the offer of J. P. Morgan to give the city a plot of land next to the beautiful memorial to his father, Junius Spencer Morgan, was accepted and a building to cost half a million dollars will be erected by Mr. Morgan. Tonight the day after the dedication of his father's memorial library and art museum, his gifts to the city now approximate two million dollars. The newly purchased land will be occupied by municipal buildings and will be raised at once.

HUSE URGES LICENSE VOTE EVERY 4 YEARS

Secretary of Brewers Humbly Offers a Bill on Beacon Hill.

Henry V. Huse, citizen of Winthrop, exercising his constitutional right, petitions for legislation.

Mr. Huse proposes that once in four years is often enough for Boston to vote "yes" or "no" on the question of licensing the sale of liquors. We now vote annually.

Mr. Huse is secretary of the Boston Brewers' Association, with an office overlooking Police Headquarters at No. 26 Pemberton square.

The Huse bill was filed yesterday by Representative Andrew Doyle of Bedford. Mr. Huse and Mr. Doyle call it an act "for further legislation relative to the granting of licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors." Inquiries among Beacon hill folk have read this in the bill:

"The aldermen and selectmen, respectively, shall insert in the warrant for the annual city election or town meeting an article providing for a vote upon the question: 'Shall licenses be granted for the sale of intoxicating liquors in this city or town?' Except that in the city of Boston this article shall be inserted only in the years in which a mayor is to be elected."

And there you are.

REVIVE WATERWAY FREIGHT CARRYING

Commission Will Recommend Fixing of Rates by Railroads Competing With Packets.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—The National Waterways Commission will submit a report to Congress Monday which, if adopted, the members believe will at once revive waterway transportation of freight and create genuine competition between the railroads and river packets that tap the same territory.

The commission will recommend that the Interstate Commerce Commission be given power to fix the minimum rates to be charged by any railroad in a territory that enters into competition with waterway traffic and that the commission also be given the power to regulate freight rates by water.

These recommendations were based upon the facts disclosed after a long inquiry that railroads, in order to drive river transportation lines out of the business, have followed the practice of cutting rates to such a low figure that the water transportation lines could not afford to handle it and then restore the rates when the competition of the inland waterways was such that competition was not present.

LATIN SCHOOL GIRLS LOSE COSTLY FURS

Dressing Room Stripped of Its Finest Coats; Hunt in Vain for the Thieves.

Students in the Girls' Latin School, which faces Huntington avenue near the Fenway and is but a short distance from Mrs. John L. Gardner's Italian palace, have been robbed of valuable coats and furs which they left in dressing rooms.

The stealing has been going on since the school opened in September, but it is claimed, and the police are searching for three men who on Friday last stole four valuable coats. Miss Margaret Wilson of Dorchester lost a coat valued at $100; Miss Mary Watson of Allston, a coat valued at $90; Miss Ruth Marion of Chestnut Hill, a coat valued at $75; and Miss Nadie O'Sullivan of Wellesley, one valued at $50.

It is said that Friday morning last Dan Crowley saw three men at the High School of Commerce, a building in the same group as the Girls' Latin, and when he asked them what they wanted they told him they came in for a drink of water. He thought no more about them until after the robbery. It is supposed they got from the high school to the other building by a tunnel, and are the three men seen by Miss Elizabeth O'Leary of No. 15 Dale street, Roxbury, coming out of a dressing room and carrying girls' garments. She says it is stated that when she was about to give an alarm, one man took a club out of his pocket and threatened to strike her if she made an outcry.

The men escaped, it is supposed, through the front door.

The Way to Cure All Skin Diseases

The Prescription Is Simple: Purify the Blood by Using Stuart's Calcium.

A Trial Package Sent Free.

If people only realized the utter absurdity of attempting to cure a pimply, blotchy, unsightly complexion by means of the many irrational and illogical methods employed in "beauty parlors," and also in the boudoirs, thousands of dollars which are wasted every year—literally thrown away—would be saved, and the complexion rendered clear and free from blemishes through constitutional treatment, at about one-fourth of one per cent of the cost of the "fancy" and exceedingly expensive local "treatments."

The idea of massaging the cheeks, and attempting to rub in a so-called "skin-food," is the height of nonsense. Nature never intended the skin to be fed from the outside, but from within, inside exclusively, and it is the blood which really feeds the skin, builds it up, and supplies it with nutriment absorbed from the digestive system. There is really no such thing as a "skin-food," any more than there is a "heart-food," or "lung-food," or a "brain-food."

The skin is a water-proof, air-proof envelope over the muscular system, and it has no power to absorb any cold creams, or any other medicaments, when rubbed over its surface. While, of course, steaming the face, or massaging with electricity, or by hand, will draw the blood temporarily to the surface and produce a red appearance, which may last half an hour or so, but such treatment brings no lasting benefit, and will never cure wrinkles, pimples, pustules, blackheads, or other facial blemishes.

Besides, the frequent treatment of the skin in the way which "beauty doctors" have—those kneading, rubbing, "cooking" methods, making the face for the time being as red as a boiled lobster—only have the very undesirable effect of increasing and strengthening the hair-growth on the cheeks.

The only logical treatment in acquiring and maintaining a perfect complexion, devoid of all blemishes, such as blotches, pimples, roughness, chapping, scaly patches, etc., is to go after these troubles from the inside—to strike at the foundation, the origin of the complaints—and that means, in other words, to thoroughly purify the blood by using STUART'S CALCIUM WAFERS.

These powerful little wafers, as soon as taken into the system, exert their wonderful, blood-purifying influence, and they never let up for a moment, until every atom of impurity in the blood is eliminated, and, in addition to that, they also build up the blood stream, then the circulation through the skin's surface, and thus render wrinkles and skin blemishes impossible of existence.

TALENTED NEW YORK READER, BRIDE-TO-BE OF JOHN J. HAYES

MISS G. BRAN WHITE

LEGISLATOR HAYES TO JOIN BENEDICTS

CONGRATULATIONS are being showered upon Representative John J. Hayes of Charlestown upon the announcement of his wedding in the near future to Miss G. Bran White, the beautiful and talented niece of Police Captain C. C. Collins of New York. The wedding will take place on January 26 in the rectory of St. Patrick's Church, at Bensonhurst, L. I.

The bride-to-be is a talented musician and amateur reader, and herself known in Charlestown, where she has often visited. The bridesmaid will be Miss Mildred White, sister of the bride, and the best man will be Robert C. Fitzgerald of Charlestown, a friend of the bridegroom.

Representative Hayes has been Grand Knight of the Beatley Hill Council, Knights of Columbus, for three years, president of the Father Mathew Temperance Association and Literary Society for two years, and president of St. Francis Association for two years. He has served two years in the City Government as Councilman, and in 1908 successfully ran for re-election to the House of Representatives from Wards 4 and 5.

Representative Hayes is a graduate of Rowen College of the class of 1900 and Boston University Law School of 1903. Among other events in his rapid political career was the presentation, in 1909, of a bill to abolish the eighty-cent gas bill before the Legislature.

After a wedding tour, the young couple will live at No. 2 Pearl street, Ward 4, where it is expected that Representative Hayes will entertain the friends of his friends and become a candidate for the Senate. To facilitate the handling of his increasing law business Representative Hayes will also open a night office at his home.

3,000 CONSUMPTIVE GREEKS

Easy Prey to Disease, Declares a Lowell Minister.

LOWELL, Jan. 22.—Of a Greek population numbering at least 10,000, 60 per cent have consumption in various stages, according to a statement made by Rev. Panos G. Ginieres to the Board of Health. On his recommendation the board voted to send inspectors through the Greek district to report any and all tenements not in a sanitary condition.

"Cholera is the only city that has more Greeks than Lowell in this entire country," said Mr. Ginieres. "It is unfortunate that these people come to America in such numbers. They think they can live in this country for a few years, save up a lot of money, and then go back to Greece to pass their last days in peace and prosperity. Then find their mistake. They go back to die of consumption, if they or their friends have enough money to take them back. Little do they think when they go into the tenement district of Lowell that they are preparing their own graves."

CORBETT ACQUITTED; ARRESTED UPON NEW CHARGE

Boston Man on Stand Protests He Did Not Kill Randall in Providence Holdup.

PROVIDENCE, Jan. 22.—In just one hour and 40 minutes after the case of crime for which he was on trial, the murder on January 22 last year of Charles E. Randall, a jury at 5:20 o'clock tonight brought in a verdict of not guilty against Joseph B. Corbett, Jr.

He proved an alibi by Boston witnesses who gave conclusive testimony that he was employed by the Johnson Paper Manufacturing Company at ten o'clock on the morning of the crime, the time Randall was held up and murdered in the office of the concern of $5,000 in cash which he had secured from a Pawtucket bank to pay the employes of the Glendinning dye works.

Directly after his acquittal Corbett was rearrested by Inspector Monahan of Providence on a warrant charging him with arson. State Officer Hodges of Taunton, Mass., prefers the new charge and the warrant is dated November 27.

The lawyers spent all the afternoon summing up and the jury was charged late in the day. Custom was ignored in giving the case to the jurors on a Saturday evening.

Corbett was brought face to face with Mrs. Harriet Cady and her daughter, Mrs. Susan B. Barnes, who had testified that he was at their home in East Providence on the evening before the shooting. He steadfastly denied their story. Then returned to the stand and again stated as positively that Corbett was there.

Relied on an Alibi.

This feature of the trial was important, because Corbett relied altogether on an alibi to secure his liberty. Both he and his beautiful young wife, who lived at No. 94 Oak street, Boston, at the time of the crime, had sworn that Corbett was at home in Boston on the night before the shooting and that he was at work in that city the day of the murder itself.

Corbett also denied the story told by William L. Reese, a Providence detective, and his young wife, Ethel Rose. Reese had sworn that Corbett pointed out to the scene of the shooting to him and had afterward confessed to the murder of him and his wife. Mrs. Rose had verified this story. Corbett admitted that he showed Reese where the shooting occurred, but merely as any other person familiar with it would do.

Story of the Holdup.

The Rose were the principal witnesses against Corbett. It was they who worked up the case for the Government, and who, after a long search, claimed to have convicted Corbett and induced him to confess.

Corbett was tried for murder in the first degree, January 22, 1909, Miss Emma A. Dodge, daughter of the paymaster of the Cranston mills at East Providence, was driving from Providence to the mills with $5,000 in currency to pay off the employes. She was accompanied by Charles Randall. At an isolated spot highwaymen appeared and held up the occupants of the sleigh. They opened fire and Randall fell back, mortally wounded. Miss Dodge, who was also hit, whipped up the horse and drove to the way to the mills, where she collapsed after telling the story of the holdup.

Rewards amounting to $1,250 were offered for the conviction of the murderer or murderers, and Inspector Hodges, after working on Corbett for several weeks last summer, declared that he had obtained the man's confession. Corbett was arrested and his trial began this week.

NAVY DEPARTMENT HEARS BOSTON PLEA

Business Agent St. Claire M Lent of the Patternmakers' Association returned yesterday from Washington, where he with other labor men representing the navy yard trades made an appeal in opposition with Assistant Secretary of the Navy Winthrop. The claim of the laborers connected with the Charlestown yard is that they are being discriminated against by the administration. They say that where 1,900 men were employed a few weeks ago, only 500 men have work now.

Lent said that Mr. Winthrop, L. Germon, first vice-president of the general union, J. A. Middleton, representing the New York union, and J. J. Berries, general secretary-treasurer of Metal Trades section of the American Federation of Labor, called upon Secretary Meyer and were pleasantly received. He said they discussed the ratings of men employed in the Charlestown yard and the complaints made. He was told that they were be mated properly.

BOSTON SWIFTEST CITY--FOR TAXI FARES

Board Finds All Meters Tell Fibs; Wouldn't That Turn Joy Ride Into Gloom?

Taxicab drivers in Boston wear rings on their fingers and bells all over their taxicabs which ring up a ten-cent tune most discordant with the harmony of honesty.

An extra would be issued to this effect if it were real news, but as a matter of truth, every taxicab rider in Boston has known it all along. Only nobody had the nerve to kick.

Permission to refer to this in open print was granted only yesterday when the State Department of Weights and Measures officially denounced the knavish taximeters. What do you suppose the department found? Not a single upright taxi in the whole city, every conscienceless machine showing a discrepancy in favor of the operating company.

The State officials ascertained that these taximeters allow only twelve minutes of waiting time for the fifty cents recorded, instead of the eighteen minutes provided by city ordinances. That's where the ten-cent toll comes in—ten cents every six minutes.

Commissioner Palmer has taken formal action with respect to the discoveries of the tests, by condemning four of the taximeters. The manufacturers have been interviewed regarding the discrepancy, and they have informed the commissioner that they will immediately take steps to remedy the inaccurate recording of the meters.

I WAS A Heavy Drinker

Consumed quart of whiskey every 24 hours.

CURED IN 3 DAYS

If you know anyone who drinks alcohol to excess, regardless of cause, send my FREE book, "Confessions of an Alcohol Slave."

I drank beer at first, then gradually developed into a drinker of strong liquors. When drinking heavily I wouldn't hesitate to leave my office or a saloon window to get drunk. For long periods I would not eat a thing but drink whiskey and beer daily. I was a nervous wreck, could not sleep.

I damaged business, health and social opportunities, made enemies of friends, lost friends and became an unsociable, unwelcome burden upon all except confirmed drunkards. I squandered my money for drink—my earnings.

For 18 years I kept it up, and I was regarded as a hopeless case. Many times I did me no good. But now I have a joyful message to all addicted to drink.

Mothers, Wives, Sisters

While drifting from bad to worse, as all drunkards do, I accidentally learned a way to cure myself. It was the turning point in my life. My health was quickly restored, I became and am a respectable man, enjoying every benefit of home, wife, society and business, and I can truthfully say I have not touched a drop of liquor since. I took no cast iron, I broke no pledge, I made no sacrifice. I simply forgot the craving for liquor ceased, I could merely take it or let it alone. I could and would drink with other moderate drinkers, and those were due to my indulgence in strong drink.

WONDERFUL

My cure lasted 3 days; if I had relied upon will power or such a weak tool as strychnine, bromides or alcohol none can say I will power while drinking. I had no will power. I had no strength whatever. I had to depend on myself entirely. I had to do it myself. Others had depended on myself entirely. I had to do it myself. Others had depended on myself entirely. I had to do it myself. Others had depended

LORENZ is a pleasant-faced, soft-spoken little man, 145 pounds in weight and five feet six inches tall.

He tells in graphic detail of a dozen brainstorms. To hear him describe the change that comes over him as the shadows of night fall is to watch either a great actor or to see a miserable creature bound by the laws of fate.

His deft fingers that moulded cakes have a grip of steel. They are an inch longer than normal to his build. They are the hands of a strangler.

Lorenz has a remarkable head, with a wide, high forehead. His eyes are soft in repose, but in excitement light up as quickly as one turns on an incandescent lamp.

LEGISLATURE HAS 1316 BILLS; BOSTON MEASURES PROMINENT IN THE LIST

A RECORD year for the Massachusetts Legislature is forecasted by the quantity and quality of the petitions for new legislation filed in the Senate and House. Time for filing petitions expired at 5 o'clock last evening. A total of 1,316 documents—1,101 in the House and 215 in the Senate—have been filed. Last year's petitions numbered 1,372.

Although this year's number of bills falls below that of last year, the new business for 1910 eclipses in importance that for any previous year. Big municipal problems, memorials to Congress for tariff revision, direct nomination, charter amendments for various cities, labor bills, liquor bills, Sunday bills and bills of every description figure in the mass of measures to be considered.

Petitions from Mayor Hibbard and Mayor Elect Fitzgerald were filed before the time limit expired. Mayor Frank A. Hall of Malden and Edward Lind of Medford, the latter of which city Congressman Gardner was formerly mayor, were among those to present petitions. Petitions were also filed by Mayor-elect James H. Vahey and Mayor Joseph E. Pelletier, asking for direct nominations for United States Senators and for resolutions to Congress for tariff revision.

The officers of the Senate and House clerks were reappointed. Friends of Fitzgerald say the latter's choice of clerks was made with the idea of placing upon the Republican ticket in 1910 a candidate who will be able to carry the city of Boston, and thus overcome the opposition of anti-administration Democrats.

Petitions were filed for the appointment of a commission to investigate the question of direct nominations, and for the abolition of such commission on each application.

The Railroad Commission was directed to file and for the protection of the bondholders of the Boston & Maine Railroad, a petition for the appointment of a receiver, in connection with the Hoosac Tunnel & Wilmington Railroad, in connection with the Boston & Maine Railroad, in connection with the Boston & Maine Railroad, in connection with the Boston & Maine

The Passing of Artificial Teeth

THE NATURAL RESTORATION METHOD
DOES AWAY

With the Old Style False Teeth.

THOMAS JEFFERSON KING, D.D.S.

DENTISTRY, which is a branch of surgery, has advanced wonderfully in the past few years. In fact, although Dentistry does not give the patients given the great returns of surgery, its wonders are no less. The ideal replacement of one lost tooth would be the natural growth of new ones, as take their places such as happens when children lose their first or baby teeth. The lost teeth of the adult can now be restored by the science of dentists in such a manner that it is impossible under ordinary circumstances, to detect the restored teeth from the original or natural ones. The Restoration Method is not one of those [illegible] crowns or bridges — that [illegible] ability is done away with and there is no noticeable [illegible] of [illegible] work in your mouth. No false teeth even to grow out of your gums just as do your natural teeth. It is a wonderful improvement over the old method of replacing lost teeth with false ones. Dr. King does his Restoration work at a cost actually now [illegible]. Before having any teeth extracted, see Dr. King about painlessly and painlessly restoring your teeth. It Pays.

Other Departments of Dentistry.

Full set teeth with the "Natural Gums" $5, gold crowns $5, bridge work $5, painless, pure cold filling $1 up, other fillings 50c, painless extraction free when sets are ordered. All work guaranteed.

POEHLER PICKED TO WIN $400 BOWLING MATCH

Meets Christopher To-Morrow for Twenty Strings; Great Interest Over Result.

By ED. COGSWELL.

All aboard for that match between Paul Poehler and Al Christopher to-morrow for a wager of $400. It is to be rolled at the Boston Elks Association alleys in the afternoon and the remainder of the strings taking place at 8 in the evening at the Boston alleys.

Not excepting the 6 day bicycle match of a few years ago, there is more interest in sporting circles over this match. Little else was talked about at the alleys when the news broke and many the argument and phase was put up by the admirers of each of these two.

But it doesn't tell which will carry off the money, and as the day draws near it is safe to say the affair has settled itself into a case of which bowler can stand the most pressure. Both are known as cool customers, and it is a safe bet that neither will be affected by the occasion.

Will Get After Galway.

This would have been settled before details later on, but Poehler was ill and may be yet. However, it is said that Poehler was the one who decided the time in getting after Galway and it is safe to say that he will be there.

If he does, Poehler will have the match won before Galway has a chance to go after Poehler. Instead of trying to beat that other match Poehler has been going at, he will simply try to beat Galway's record and let the other match go. Galway is going to be a hard man to beat, and Poehler knows it. He has been practicing for this match for a long time and has been getting down to the point where he will have a chance to beat Galway's record.

Christopher-Crescenzo Match.

Writing of Christopher reminds us that the two weeks' lay-off of the bowlers are having considerable effect on the failure in not being able to roll the Crescenzo-Christopher match. It seems as if the chance of a match being rolled in North Adams and would consider rolling over the rolling alleys in North Adams, and Manager Curtis announces he will put up a purse of $250 to have it played there.

Manager Joseph Smith of the match alleys in Springfield declares that there are considerations will be given if a match bowling in North Adams takes half of the winner, and will bring a team there. Smith is to be certain of the match coming his way or a part of it, as the first match is over his alleys. The two separate matches are to be rolled [illegible]

Employes at the Factory Receive Driving Lessons with Old Car.

A Wonderful Business Story

We have told in a book—which we ask you to send for—one of the greatest business stories ever told. A story of how John N. Willys stepped in two years to the topmost place in motordom. Of how Overland automobiles rose in 24 months to this year's sale of $24,000,000. How a factory has grown like magic to a payroll of 4,000 men—to a daily output of 30 carloads of automobiles. And how a large part of the demand of the country has been centered around one remarkable car.

The Discovery

Here is an outline of the story—just enough to make you want it all.

Two years ago, Mr. John N. Willys was a dealer in automobiles. There came to him one day a remarkable car—evidently the creation of a mechanical genius. The simplest, sturdiest, smoothest running car that anyone around there had seen.

The name of the car was the Overland. And the price—then, $1,250—was as amazing as the car itself.

The sale of this car spread like wildfire Each car sold brought a call for twenty others like it. Old and new motor car owners came by the score to deposit advance money—attracted by the Overland's matchless simplicity.

But the cars did not come. And when Mr. Willys went to the makers he found them on the verge of receivership.

The genius which had created this marvelous car could not finance the making in the face of the 1907 panic.

The New Start

Mr. Willys in some way met the overdue pay roll—took over the plant—and contrived to fill his customers' orders.

Then the cry came for more cars from every place where an Overland had been sold. As the new cars went out the demand became overwhelming. The factory capacity was outgrown in short order. Then tents were erected.

Another factory was acquired, then another, but the demand soon outgrew all three.

During the next fiscal year these factories sent out 4,075 Overland cars. Yet the demand was not half supplied.

Dealers fairly fought for preference. Buyers paid premiums. None could be content with a lesser car when he once saw the Overland.

All this without advertising. About the only advertising the car ever had was what users told others.

The Pope-Toledo Plant

Mr. Willys' next step was to buy the Pope-Toledo factory—one of the greatest automobile plants in the country. This gave him four well-equipped factories—just 16 months from his start.

But the Toledo plant wasn't sufficient. So he gave his builders just 40 days to complete an addition larger than the original factory.

Then he equipped these buildings with the most modern machinery—with every conceivable help and convenience—so that cars could be built here for less than any where else.

Now 4,000 men work on Overland cars The output is valued at $140,000 per day. The contracts from dealers for this season's delivery call for 20,000 cars.

Now this man has acquired 23 acres around his Toledo plant. And his purpose is to see—from this time on—that those who want Overlands get them.

Marvelous Sales

Dealers had ordered 16,000 of the 1910 Overland models before the first car was delivered. That means that each Overland sold the previous year had sold four others like it.

And without any advertising.

This year's Overland sales will exceed $24,000,000. Yet the Overland is but two years old.

The $1,000 Overland

This year an Overland—better than last year's $1,250 car—is being sold for $1,000. That is because the tremendous production has cut the cost 20 per cent.

A 25 horsepower car, capable of 50 mi. an hour, for $1,000, complete with lamps and magneto. Never did a maker give nearly so much for the money.

There are higher-powered Overlands for $1,250—$1,400—$1,500. They are just as cheap in comparison as the $1,000 model.

The Overlands are unique in simplicity They operate by pedal control. A ten-year old child can master the car in a moment.

They are made in the same factory, and by the same men as made the Pope-Toledo —a $4,250 car. The reason for the price lies in the production of 125 cars per day.

Get the Whole Story

Send me this coupon to get the whole story, told in a fascinating book. Learn about the car which in two years captured so large a share of the whole trade of the country. Exactly 556 Brand New Tailored Suits for Women and Misses

Not a Suit in the Lot Worth Less Than $16.50; Many Actual $25.00 Suits

Offered Monday in the Bargain Basement at the Round Price of $8.00

The poorest suits in this purchase LESS THAN HALF PRICE! The finest suits in this purchase LESS THAN ONE-THIRD ACTUAL VALUE! And all made up within the last ten days—therefore, all NEW—the very latest styles.

Here's The Reason for this Amazing Bargain!!

Crystal & Graef, high-grade manufacturers at 19 and 21 West 24th St., New York had these 500 odd suits on their hands, some of them samples, some cancellations of orders, others made up from ends of materials, in other words, an odd lot to close for manufacturers. They wanted to close them out at once, to clear the deck for their spring work (note the manufacturer's reason). To move the entire lot (556 suits) at once, they sold them to us last Thursday at less than half their lowest wholesale prices.

You'll probably never get a bigger or better bargain.

The materials in these beautiful suits are elegant broadcloths, wide wales, serges, worsteds and novelty stripes. The Coats are mostly in the new spring lengths and fashioned on the newest lines. The Skirts are all the new full plaited ideas. All are elegantly lined, many of them with guaranteed satin lining. All sizes for women and 14, 16, 18, 20 year sizes for misses and small women.

Five of the Many Styles at $8.00

ALWAYS BEAR IN MIND, that only a fraction of the Bargains to be found in our Basement Store are advertised. Many lots are so cheap that they are sold out before we have a chance to advertise them. ANY QUANTITY OF LOTS, not advertised here, ON SALE MONDAY—some Half Price.

BROCKTON MAYOR IS TAKING LESSONS OF EXPERT

People, Too, Being Educated in the Value of Industrial Schools.

OLD BROWN FOOTBALL STAR

Comes All the Way From Wisconsin to Point the Way to Great Success.

BROCKTON Jan 22—Training a Mayor to t[each] the people and then teaching t[he] people to appreciate what the Mayor is going to teach, is the latest stunt in Brockton municipal life. And the town says is doing the teaching has been brought twenty-two hundred miles from way off Wisconsin to do the job.

The man in the case, Professor Charles McCarthy, a Brockton young man who worked his way through Brown University and then went out West to study at the University of Wisconsin. His fame since going out there has become country-wide. He is the founder of the people's lobby, the man who trains legislators to make good laws for the people.

For two weeks he has been in Brockton and in that time Mayor William H. Cliff ford has sat at his feet and imbibed learning on the one great question that involves the supremacy of Brockton in the whole world, [illegible] industries, [illegible].

Learns From Expert.

It is a remarkable trait in Mayor Cliff ford that he is [illegible] in humble[illegible] that there are some things he is not capable of advising his citizens about until he gets a chance to consult with experts. And like Solomon of old he is ready to learn from all from wise men and children.

"I believe in industry, said [illegible] the new Mayor said to an American reporter as Dr. McCarthy came to Brockton, "but I am not fully prepared to argue for it. I never received more than a grammar school education and it would be funny for me to go out and try to teach the other people.

"When Mr. McCarthy came here things began to look different to me. He is a learned man and one of us. He knows what we need as well as we do and if he thinks we should have a course for his learning I shall volunteer to the cause of the people.

"I went to his house and he talked to me [illegible] I learned more [illegible] hours than I ever knew [illegible] I am going again, for he is democratic and glad to help us people of his own city.

"After the boys going to have lectures talk to the people [illegible] and to them what industrial education means to us and the country generally. I want him to explain to them as he did to me how vital that education is to the continued prosperity of the city."

Waking Up the People.

And Charles McCarthy, Ph. D., former Brown University football star and later founder of the great people's lobby, is going [illegible] the people of Brockton just as they need it in the way of industrial education, waking them up and showing them that their own future as well as that of the next generation depends on [illegible] which shall train skilled workers to succeed them in the shops.

The Mayor does not mind it a bit. In fact, he is, to quote his own words, "tickled to death that the people are getting their information from the best possible source."

LYNN'S MOTORMAN MAYOR STUDIES LAW TO ENTER PRACTICE

Mayor James E. Rich, Lynn's motorman mayor, who has just entered on his second term at City Hall, will forsake the clank of car controllers for the practice of law when he relinquishes his hold on the city affairs.

It is not generally known that the motorman mayor, taken from a car barn by the minority party in Lynn and elevated by the people as mayor of a solid Republican city, is delving into law. Nor do many of his classmates at the Boston Y. M. C. A. law school realize that one of the most studious among their number is Mayor James E. Rich [illegible].

Such however is the case, although the Mayor has prefaced these cognizant of his aim to secrecy. He plans to acquire sufficient knowledge of law to pass the bar examination by another year, doing the usual three years' course in two years. Then, according to a close friend, he will enter partnership with a prominent Lynn attorney and hang out his shingle.

Mayor Rich had only a grammar school education when he started in to earn a man's pay by going to work for the street railway company, but he liked books and what spare time he had he did a lot of reading. His rise from a helper in the car barn to motorman and conductor and from that to foreman of the Myrtle street stables attested his ability.

SOCIETY FAVORITE BACK IN NEWPORT AFTER A DIVORCE

MABEL GOULD STICKNEY

MRS. STICKNEY MAY RETURN TO STAGE

Former Chorus Girl and Model Silent on Question of a Remarriage.

NEWPORT, Jan 22 Mrs. Harold Dean Stickney, who left Newport ten days ago for Boston has now returned to her Newport home at No. 6 Halidon avenue. [illegible] of Mrs. Mabel Gould Stickney has been [illegible] ever since the news of the divorce from her husband first came to Newport in the early days of 1909.

When in Anne and Newport in May Mrs. Stickney said she was doing so [illegible] to be out of the papers and would not express herself on the subject of [illegible] marriages such as her own was supposed to be.

The fact that Mrs. Stickney was a model for Mrs. Francis J. Grund [illegible] sister of Mr. Jacob Astor added to [illegible] the condition favors for Mrs. Stickney in Newport where all the town said she was simply brazen [illegible] and the brother [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Apology Is the Hall-Mark of Courage

By Herbert Kaufman

Take your medicine; procrastination can't possibly sweeten it. You'll only increase the ultimate number of doses by seeking to postpone them. The more you hold back the more bitterness imagination will add to the prescription.

If you've hired the fiddler, you must settle his bill. If you keep him waiting, he'll add interest for the delay. Realize now and for all time that when you play you must pay—Conscience is sure to present her statement, and when Conscience finds that the account is overdue and starts out to dun for a settlement, the meanest collection agency you've ever known behaves like a philanthropic enterprise by contrast.

Only very little persons with flaxseed souls and shriveled brains are wilfully unjust. Broad-minded people play their cards in the game of life as they play them in a game of whist—fairly—squarely cleanly. They don't consciously renege, and when corrected for an oversight they cheerfuly submit to the established penalty for spoiling everybody else's hand.

No one is expected to judge all things correctly all the time. Human brains are as full of flaws as a sieve is filled with holes.

The best minds have their occasional weak spots—the finest intellects have their little leaks. Omniscience is only demanded of deities.

The most that can ever be asked of you is that you do your very best. Every now and then you're bound to be in error—so you don't shake confidence in your average of discretion, when you volunteer the acknowledgment of a mistake.

On the other hand, if you persist in defending what is palpably indefensible—when you insist that white be regarded as black, you do not establish proof thereby; you merely establish a reputation for self-and color-blindness which vitiates your prospect for support and co-operation on other occasions when you are really sane and absolutely well-founded in your position.

The child caught in an outright lie gains a name as a falsifier when he seeks to evade what is unescapably evident.

The clerk who tries to cover what was originally an innocent error involves himself in suspicion and blocks his own advancement.

The world has learned many a bitter lesson from dealing with inconsistency. That egotism which induces complacency in the face of egregious blunders is as dangerous as dishonesty.

Assurance is a forceful asset, but when it is founded upon conceit instead of self-analysis, it is as perilous as an over-pressure of steam to a frail boiler.

Reliability compensates for many a mental lack. We withhold confidence from those who wilfully bandage their own eyes for fear that they will pull the wool over ours. Granted that ignorance, rather than intent, is the motive, the effect is just as severe and as costly.

Frankness is a virtue of valor. Self criticism is a wholesome exercise and is as beneficial as physical calisthenics. It is certain to strengthen and develop moral power; it is a brake upon impulse and wanton recklessness.

You're never so right as when you admit to a wrong; you're never so tall in dignity as when you own up that you've been small. The biggest and finest thing on the face of the earth is the sight of a strong man knuckling down and confessing of his own accord that he has been guilty of a weakness.

Apology cannot demean; it glorifies. It's the hall-mark of simon-pure courage. It's the trade-mark of a real gentleman. It's the liquidation of a debt to honor—all the more pressing because it can't be wiped out by compulsory measures.

You Haven't Lost

1-23-06

The next hand may not be the same.
Though this one hit you hard
You really haven't lost the game,
Go on and play your card.
Persistence is as sure as fate,
Fools only call it "luck."
Miss Fortune's coming may be late.
But she'll give in to pluck.
A coward can be skilled and wise,
Still one small yellow streak
Will discount all his enterprise;
His soul has sprung a leak.
If fear has gripped him by the heart
No fighter can survive;
Doubt puts the horse behind the cart:
A quitter won't arrive.

In the course of his lecture remarks about the

It was in the State of Minas Geraes in 1729 that diamonds were first found in Brazil, and it was universally conceded that diamonds were first found in the alluvial gold workings, and that they were used by the ignorant miners as counters when playing cards. Individual mining was completely prohibited, and the work was left out to contractors in 1740, but it was on record that all the conditions were scandalously abused. Contracts were abandoned in 1771, the Government taking the management into its own hands until 1832, when the workings were thrown

OPPOSE KNOX PLAN.

Papers Attack Manchurian Railway's Neutralization Idea.

TOKIO Jan 22 The leading news papers disapprove of the acceptance by Japan of Secretary Knox's proposition for the neutralization of the Manchurian railways. The consensus of opinion here is that the plan is impracticable because Japan would not receive a benefit proportionate with the sacrifice entailed.

It is held that the interests of the Japanese settlers in southern Manchuria could not be protected under such an arrangement.

Official circles remain noncommittal on the subject. It is generally believed here that Russia will decline to accept the American suggestion.

GUESTS OF CUPID, SMART SET HARKS TO WEDDING BELLS

Although Grand Opera Was Lacking, Society Maids and Matrons Were Kept in Steady Whirl of Gayety by Number of Smart Events; Merry Waltz Had First Place in the List of Interesting Affairs.

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT

THE week but past was the second of the Winter without Opera there were enough other smart events to keep the world [illegible] in a merry whirl of gayety.

Dances held first place and not a night but had its quota of these smart events. They were mostly in honor of the débs, but the older members of the circle set need not [illegible] a goodly share in the gayeties.

The week opened with Mrs. Prados's dance at the Tuileries Monday evening, Mrs. Mills's dance Tuesday evening and so on down through the week.

Weddings, though not as numerous, made up in importance what they lost in numbers. It was rather a shock to even her closest friends in Boston when word was received that the fascinating young widow, Mrs. George Nickerson, for whom all of the [illegible] so ably, was married on Wednesday at the home of her sister, Mrs. James Lawson, in Burlington, Ia., to Captain Horace Lambert Alexander Hood of the British Royal Navy.

Mrs. Nickerson, who owns a handsome estate in Dedham as well as a beautiful home on Commonwealth avenue, and one in Washington, D. C., has [illegible] her husband's death traveling abroad. Her [illegible] sent in Washington, where she is an acknowledged leader in society circles. Her engagement has several [illegible] of foreigners and wealthy Americans, but each [illegible] I've had begun to believe that matrimony held [illegible] for the pretty young widow.

BRIDEGROOM IS NAVAL VETERAN.

Captain Hood is the second son of the fourth Viscount Hood. He has been [illegible] since he was thirteen and is now nearly forty. He has received various certificates and honors and has received several medals [illegible] for gallantry. He is a member of the Victoria Order and [illegible] of the Most Honorable Service Order.

The wedding of Miss Julia Appleton Tuckerman and Louis Chapin, which took place at the Church of the Messiah on Tuesday, was the most [illegible] of the week in town and was the mecca for fashionables [illegible].

Miss Tuckerman is the daughter of Mrs. Charles Tuckerman of Bay State Road, a member of the Vincent and New Riding Clubs, and ever since her debut has been looked upon as quite the most important belle of her exclusive coterie.

Mr. Chapin is in Yale '95 man, a resident of London. It is there that he and his beautiful young bride will make their future home. The quaint little church where the ceremony took place was decorated with laurel and lilies. The Rev. Endicott Peabody assisted by the Rev. John McGaw Foster officiated.

It was a notable group of bridal[illegible] Miss Tuckerman selected as her attendants, including her strikingly handsome sister, Mrs. Charles Fitzgerald, who was matron of honor, and Miss Julia Meyer, the little brunette beauty who came on from her home in Washington for the occasion. Miss Ruth Nickerson of Dedham, the most important of last season's buds, Miss Adelaide Jackson, president of the Vincent Club, and Miss Madeline Appleton [illegible] a consult. They were gowned alike in fussy creations of palest pink chiffon with garnitures of [illegible] satin and large Leghorn smoke mauline hats trimmed with wreaths of pink tree buds. They certainly made a picturesque foil for the tall blonde bride in her floating robe of white satin covered with rare old family lace and her long enveloping veil of tulle caught to the coiffure with a coronet of orange blossoms.

Instead of the usual bouquet she carried an Horr-bound prayer book, which she calmly perused before starting on her march altar-ward while her lively attendants lingered and fluttered about her like so many bees. She heeded them not a bit and was the calmest one of the lot. After the ceremony a large reception and breakfast followed at the Tuckerman home.

MANY DISTINGUISHED GUESTS PRESENT.

Among the guests [illegible] the bride's mother, distinguished in black satin and a small white [illegible] which was vastly becoming.

Mrs. John Parkinson, Jr., was among the early arrivals and wore black velvet, trimmed with touches of white and a large black velvet hat.

Miss Elinor Quincy, who is [illegible] in light fawn cloth, Miss Beatrice Ayer in brown and Miss Rosamond Bradlee in purple cloth and large black hat, with purple trimming.

Mrs. Caleb Loring was in black velvet and Mrs. John L. Thorndike in violet cloth and violet velvet hat.

Among the wedding guests Vincent Club girls were Miss Dorothy Jordan, the petite blonde daughter of the Ellen Jordans, in black velvet and small black velvet toque; Mary Fay in brown cloth and brown hat, trimmed with touches of turquoise blue velvet.

Miss Dorothy Fay in light green cloth and Miss Phylis Robins in black.

The pretty little bride, Mrs. Richard Lovering, Jr., (Molly Eliot), was an early arrival and as usual was the centre of many admiring glances. She was looking especially happy and youthful in a cloth suit of dark blue and large white ermine hat and fur.

Mrs. George Von L. Meyer, who came on from her home in Washington with her daughters, was in black cloth with close fitting black velvet hat and black lynx fur.

The groom's mother, Mrs. Chapin, was in black chiffon over pale blue.

Mrs. John Lowell was in black, as was also Mrs. John S. Curtis.

One of the prettiest of the young girls there was Miss Harriet Woods, who wore a most becoming gown of pale yellow satin and large black plume laden hat. Her mother, Mrs. Joseph Woods, was in black velvet. Another extremely attractive girl was Miss Elizabeth Bliss, who wore a clinging gown of pale gray satin and a large black hat, trimmed with one immense lavender plume.

YOUNGER SET IS OUT IN FORCE

A notable group of girls standing in the entryway after the ceremony included Miss Susannah Cunningham in black cloth and small gray plumed hat, Miss Martha Peabody in scarlet cloth, and the pretty debutante, Constance Cunningham, in black velvet and small black velvet toque, trimmed with purple. Miss Alice Meyer wore a becoming gown of olive green and a [illegible].

Mr. Winfred C. Endicott was in deep toned violet cloth, and Mrs. Peter C. [illegible] was in black velvet with black hat, trimmed with shaded cerise [illegible].

Mrs. [illegible] Adam I. Young, Jr., was attractive in palest green cloth, and that winsome little heiress, Miriam Shaw, was charming in green cloth with ermine [illegible].

Mrs. William Endicott was in cerise satin and black hat, and Miss Hooton was in purple satin.

Others there were: Mrs. D. P. Appleton, Mrs. F. R. Appleton, Mrs. J. W. Appleton, Mrs. R. M. and Misses Appleton, Miss Bird, Miss Blow, Mr. and Mrs. Bliss and family, Mr. and Mrs. John Curtis, Dr. and Mrs. Crockett, Mrs. and Miss L. H. Chapin, Mr. T. J. Coolidge, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. MISS CHRISTINE HUNNEWELL, SOCIETY LEADER

Of all Boston's younger society favorites there is none more genuinely popular than the delightfully democratic daughter of the Henry Hunnewells, Miss Christine. A member of the Vincent and New Riding Clubs, the exclusive Sewing Circle and, in fact, every kind of an organization that bears the stamp of ultra fashionable, she is looked upon as a leader. Miss Hunnewell made her debut two Winters ago at a reception and tea given for her by her parents, and since then has reigned supreme in the smart set. She is being a handsome girl, an accomplished musician and linguist. The portrait of Miss Hunnewell herewith presented is by Gordon C. Pugsley of the Sunday American art staff.

A coming wedding is that of Miss Priscilla Harding of the Vincent Club set, who has been spending the year abroad at whose engagement to James Sprague was announced a couple of months ago from London. Miss Harding went abroad with her mother, Mrs. Edgar Harding of Beacon street, last spring, and instead of returning with Mrs. Harding took a house near London in order that she might enjoy the hunting season in England. Miss Harding is shortly returning from London and has just announced that the wedding date has been set for February 2.

The ceremony is to take place in the [illegible] Church and will be attended by fashionables from New York, Washington and London. Miss Harding and her fiancé met two years ago in Rome. It is said strings to see how many of our girls are marrying and going over to London to live. [illegible] of the Henry Sprague [illegible] Jr., grandson of [illegible] and has lived in London ever since. Miss Priscilla Sprague, who married Mr. Chapin [illegible] and now Miss Harding—all of them to reside in London. What a delightful little colony of Boston belles there will be over there if things keep up at this rate!

Boston is much interested in the wedding of Miss Eleanor Davenport and James Watson Weeks which is to take place in St. Bartholomew's Church on February 8. The prospective bride has chosen for her attendants Mrs. Peter H. B. Frothingham, the Misses Louise Jackson, Anita Peabody, Ethel Cowdin, Margaret Dix and Katherine Atterbury. W. Seward Webb, Jr., will be the best man and the ushers will be Vanderbilt Webb, Robert L. Bacon, Joseph W. Burden, George Whitney, James J. Higginson, Jr., Gordon Abbott, Howard Russell and Ernest B. Tracy. The reception which is to follow at the Henry O. Havemeyer home will be very small on account of family mourning.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Robeson Sargent went over to New York early in the week to attend the wedding on Wednesday of Miss [illegible] brother, Ricardo M. de Zoldo, to Miss Marie de Zoldo, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick de Zoldo. The ceremony took place at St. Louis Church on East Twenty-fifth street at half past [illegible] o'clock and was followed by a dinner at the [illegible] Hotel. There was a reception following the ceremony at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. de Zoldo. Mr. T. West Derby several street, for relatives and intimate friends.

Mr. de Zoldo gave his daughter in marriage. The bride's gown was of white satin, trimmed with point lace, and the veil, which was of tulle, was fastened with orange blossoms. She carried white roses and orchids and wore a diamond [illegible] pendant.

Miss Mercedes de Zoldo was her sister's maid of honor. She wore white irish lace [illegible] with veil, a small brown velvet hat, and carried yellow roses. The Misses Mercedes de Acosta and Alice de Zoldo were bridesmaids, and wore white chiffon cloth, trimmed with satin. Their large brown hats were trimmed with cream net, and both carried old-fashioned nosegays of yellow roses.

Xavier A. Mata was best man, and the ushers were John de Zoldo, Henry J. de Acosta, Robert A. [illegible] Manning, Alexander Mc.Gr. [illegible] Townsend Burden, Jr., Thomas [illegible] Burke, Jr., and Paul de Harris.

An interesting wedding which took place in Jamaica Plain Wednesday was that of Miss Gertrude Shedd Hyde, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Fitch Hyde of Jamaica Plain, and Edward Fawling Wight of Dedham, son of Mrs. Danforth Phipps Wight and the late Danforth F. Wight, Jr., master, U. S. N. The ceremony, which took place in St. John's Episcopal Church in Jamaica Plain in the evening, was performed by the Rev. Sumner L. Sherman assisted by the Rev. Thomas Campbell. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Louise A. Hyde, and Miss Rosamond Williams. Danforth F. Wight was best man. A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents on Meyer street, where the guests were greeted by the ushers, Roswell S. Hyde of Jamaica Plain, George H. Wight of Dedham, brother of the bridegroom; William F. Mullins, Frederick Brown, Harry V. Conant and Arthur S. Prendergast.

January 29 is the date set for the wedding of Miss Margaret Elizabeth Danver, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Talbot, and Dr. William Carter Quimby. The ceremony will take place at the home of the Thayers in Worcester and will be witnessed by only the two families and most intimate friends, but the subsequent reception is to be a large and brilliant one and the invitations issued for it are many. Miss Danver, who is related to the Bee and Danver family of Boston, will be a most welcome addition to the younger matrimonial [illegible], and upon her return from the honeymoon is to assume the responsibilities of presiding over the beautifully appointed home the bridegroom has prepared for her at 304 Marlboro street. They will not be at home until after April 1, however, as they have planned a long and all winter wedding tour.

Another interesting pre-Lenten wedding will be that of the coming month of May, Mary Nash Skidmore and Henry Sanford Mann, a prominent member of the Somerset, the Country and Eastern Yacht Clubs. The nuptials will be at the Church of the Redeemer, Shawmut avenue. Miss Skidmore is the daughter of William L. Skidmore of West Forty-second street, New York.

Constance Wilcock Soon to Become Bride.

A WEDDING of the near future will be that of Miss Constance Wilcock and Frank Gair Macomber, Jr., whose engagement was announced some time ago. The affair will likely take place in the early Spring and the young couple will spend their Summer at Marblehead.

Also in the near future will come the wedding of Miss Evelyn Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bauer Humphrey of Smith road, Milton, and Reginald M. Nelson, son of Right Rev. and Mrs. Richard S. Nelson of Adams, N. Y. The engagement was announced just a fortnight ago at a tea given for the prospective bride's [illegible].

Miss [illegible] is a [illegible] Boston girl, prominent in the set of Sophia Wolfe and was a member of the Boston Cotillion. She is a graduate of Smith College, Washington and Miss Elizabeth Adams Church, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Church of Spokane. Mr. Roberts was one of the [illegible] men of the law firm of Marden & Tenbrits of Boston and was well known in athletic and social circles. He is now head of the legal department of the Spokane Falls Company. The wedding is to be solemnized at the home of the bride's parents in Spokane early the coming month. Mr. Tenbrits is a graduate of the [illegible] Law School of Boston University, class of [illegible] and has [illegible] several years in practice in that city.

The date of [illegible] conversation in which Miss [illegible] and Alexander Wessell[illegible] is to be married is not [illegible] but it is to be [illegible] in the near future. It is [illegible] that the wedding will take place in Newport, on the estate of Eugene and Edith Rowland Stevens, on which occasion Miss Ogden will receive [illegible] property. The [illegible] is to be [illegible] and the plans [illegible] at this time. It is [illegible] Miss [illegible] is [illegible] to occupy the new [illegible] in [illegible], however, although work on it will begin as soon as the weather will permit, [illegible] also [illegible] to spend the Summer of 1910 at her old-[illegible] residence.

Most interesting of all wedding [illegible] plans out of town is that of William Phillips, [illegible] secretary of the American embassy in London, and Miss Caroline Astor Drayton, Dr. John C. Phillips, brother of the prospective groom, and Mrs. Phillips, formerly Eleanor Hyde, with Miss Drayton, sailed from New York the past week for London to make the final arrangements for the marriage which is to take place there early the coming month.

SHAKESPEARE COMEDY TO OPEN NEW SHUBERT HOUSE IN SPLENDOR

Sothern and Marlowe Are Premier Stars—Big Attractions at All Leading Theatres, with "Beauty Spot," "Faith Healer," "Penelope," "Girl from Rector's," "Mr. Lode of Koal" and Others for First Nights.

By FELIX ST. CLAIR.

A NEW theatre will throw open its doors for the first time to-morrow night and the number of first-class theatres in Boston will thereby be increased to eight, one for each night and matinee. The Sam S. Shubert Theatre on Tremont street, nearly opposite Hollis, is said to be the last word in theatre construction. It is named for the late Sam S. Shubert and is owned and operated by the Shubert theatrical interests.

The Sothern-Marlowe company in Shakespearean repertory will be the attraction which will open the Shubert. Sothern and Marlowe opened the New Theatre in New York a few months ago, and it is impossible to think of a better selection to perform the same services in Boston.

To-morrow will be the most brilliant evening dramatically that Boston has seen for some time. Four other first-class attractions will open, and Henry Miller in Sunder's Theatre at Harvard will present "The Faith Healer," bringing the entire production from its New York home for one performance.

Miss Marie Tempest will be seen at the Colonial in "Penelope," the Maugham comedy with which she has been successful in London and New York.

JEFFERSON DE ANGELIS HERE, TOO.

Jefferson De Angelis, that old-time comic opera favorite, comes to the Majestic with "The Beauty Spot," one of the biggest musical comedy productions of the year.

"The Girl from Rector's" will patronize the local restaurants when she is not engaged at the Boston Theatre during the next few weeks. Elita Proctor Otis is featured with this show.

Bert Williams in "Mr. Lode of Koal," the big musical comedy written, composed and performed by colored folk, will spend a few weeks at the Globe.

"Will" Shakespeare will get his innings in fine shape, because, in addition to the Sothern-Marlowe performances, John Craig and his company will produce "Othello."

At the Grand Opera House "A Workingman's Wife" will have strange experiences that do not usually come to workingmen's wives, for which let us be thankful.

Keith's retains "The Ballet of Light" and offers Irene Franklin and a big bill.

The American Music Hall presents R. A. Roberts, the English Proteon artist, and other important features. There are four burlesque houses doing a big business and about fifty moving picture resorts turning them away.

BIG STAGE DRAWING CARDS.

"Playing Shakespeare is easy. Getting audiences at Shakespearean performances is the rub."

A well-known theatrical manager made this reply to a star who pleaded with him to send her out in classic drama. Sothern and Marlowe can play Shakespeare, and they can also make it profitable or they would not be able to continue in this line year after year.

E. H. Sothern alone is one of the biggest drawing cards on the stage. Julia Marlowe alone can fill any theatre. Associated they can do no more, and, naturally, they earn less. It speaks well for their love of art that they continue such an association.

Lots of people prefer musical comedy to Shakespeare. They had rather see a pretty chorus than a band of supers attired as Roman warriors. In justification of Shakespeare, we must remember that he wrote his plays before women were allowed to appear on the stage. If "old Bill," as Mack in Arbuckle in "The County Chairman" used to call him, had been able to use a female chorus he would have turned out musical comedies that would have made "The Merry Widow" redeemable a nine-dollar set of furs after they have been out in the rain.

For those who love the classic drama there will be a feast at the Shubert during the next fortnight. "The Taming of the Shrew," that rollicking comedy which has stood the wear of three centuries, will be given the first half of the week, and "The Merchant of Venice," "Romeo and Juliet," "Hamlet" and "Twelfth Night" will occur during the engagement.

* * * * * * * *

Miss Marie Tempest has come back to us after an absence of several seasons. This wonderful little woman has built for herself in a comparatively brief period two distinct reputations. She was the queen of comic opera singers, she even essayed grand opera, with success, and she has now won recognition as one of the most artistic comediennes on the English and American stages.

POPULAR ON TWO CONTINENTS.

She is so popular in London that she does not visit us as often as we should like. When you are enjoying her work as Penelope remember that Miss Tempest once was delighted as Carmen in Bizet's opera.

In "Penelope" W. Somerset Maugham, the English playwright who has declared that he never intends to preach or teach lessons in his plays, has given some valuable points on that much discussed topic, "How to be happy though married." It is in the second act of the play, and Professor Golightly, a teacher of mathematics, is pointing out to his daughter, Penelope, whose husband has been philandering, wherein she herself is very much to blame for the unfortunate situation in which she finds herself.

"A wise woman," remarks the professor, "never lets her husband be quite sure of her. The moment that he is, Cupid puts on a top hat and becomes a church warden."

"But, oh, father!" cries Penelope, tearfully, "why can't we go back to the beginning when we loved one another without a thought of wisdom or prudence? That was the real love. Why couldn't it last?"

"Only the blessed in Heaven want what they have," replies the professor gravely.

"You and mamma show no signs of being bored to death with one another."

"Your sainted mother," retorts the professor, seriously, "has been systematically unfaithful to me for twenty years. She has had an affair," he continues in the face of the protests of his wife and the amazement of his manicure, "with the Additional Curate's Society and an intrigue with the English Church Union. She has flirted with Christian Science, made eyes at Homeopathy, and her relations with Vegetarianism have left a distinct mark upon her figure. How could I help adoring a woman so depraved?"

And then Penelope begins to understand—and others may, too—the secret of being happy though married.

"Preserving Peaches" is the title of this recipe. The chef who is responsible for it is Jefferson De Angelis, star of "The Beauty Spot," according to the press agent who struck Boston ahead of the show. The recipe begins in the time-honored manner: "First pluck your peaches."

Press agent avers that the peaches have been plucked and are preserved in the "Beauty Spot," and we will have to take his word for it until we can see for ourselves at the Majestic to-morrow night. To proceed.

Jef De Angelis has observed with grief that the prettiest Broadway chorus girls lose their bloom when they go on the road; the peaches become spoiled. He found a remedy—athletics. He hired a physical culture instructor, and as a result after five months on the road, the peaches are preserved.

The 2 rls of this company, contrary to the usual mode of living common with chorus girls rise at 9:30 a. m. and repair to the theatre for an hour's instruction in physical culture with their athletic director, Stephen Smith. Then a brisk walk is taken, after which they eat their breakfast and lunch combined.

Except on matinee days they indulge in a practice game of basket ball, after which they are given a thorough rub-down and treatment by masseuses. They report for the night performance bubbling over with good health and animal spirits.

The general impression has always been that the chorus girl gets all the physical exercise she needs during the progress of the show. And my informant neglects to state whether the ladies retire after the performance or still fool 'round in pink tights "broiled lives." It would be interesting to see how many girls report at 9:30 a. m.

We can be sure they will be on hand at the performance, no matter how they pat? ronize the physical director.

"The Beauty Spot" is a mole on the knee of a handsome young woman who has been a model. The music is by Ivo Koven, the book by Joseph Herbert, and the principals include George MacFarlane, Frank Doane, Viola Gillette, Isabella D'Armond and Jaques Kruger.

When "The Girl from Rector's" was in New York it had a reputation for being naughty. Business men kept their tickets in plain envelopes and told their wives they were going to a meeting of the Yeggmen's Association. Their wives yelled themselves hoarse and smoked into matinee performances. With such a reputation "The Girl from Rector's" started on the road. The reputation was a foregone asset. Therefore, imagine the consternation of the press agent when the Mayor of a New Hampshire village which was visited by "The Girl" was waiting for a chance to get into Boston came out with a statement that "The Girl from Rector's" was an eminently moral show. Something had to be done to offset this well-meant criticism and the advance man was right on the job. Divorce cases, the loss of the New Hampshire verdict came, the settlement of a scandal down in Rhode Island, much patronized by millionaires in the summer—with a declaration that no one was wicked as "The Girl from Rector's" could visit such godless resorts. The day was saved and "The Girl" arrives in Boston with the glamour of naughtiness still about her.

Mayor Hibbard is still on the job, however, and the source of "Salome," "The Queen of the Mulin Rouge" and other such shows as these will not. He

The comedy of the piece is said to be irresistible. It is full of unexpected situations and ridiculous complications. Elita Proctor Otis, that accomplished actress, is responsible for much of the merriment.

"Lordy, lordy, if dat Bert Williams ain't done come to town. Dat boy will be de star."

But he'll have the support of the colored population that has placed Bert Williams and his company in a position to be first-class citizens. He has fought his way inward until he has overcome the prejudice against colored entertainers and the merits of his show have caused the entire world of theatre-goers to know his virtues.

"Mr. Lode of Koal" is the title of the musical comedy which Williams brings to the Globe Theatre after a long New York run. The company is the old Williams and Walker organization. It is sixty-five strong and includes a chorus of the prettiest brown girls who could be secured.

"Jes' Lovin' Me" is the work of colored authors and composers and it is said to teem with catchy tunes and funny situations. The story tells how Chester A. Lode is substituted for the King of Koal in place of the real King who has been kidnapped. The production is elaborately staged.

"The Duchess in Tarsus" is fifty years old. Constance Collier plays her as a young woman. She does not appear over thirty-five years old." I noticed this among the criticisms of "Israel" last Tuesday. Perhaps the critic will hesitate to buy a woman should she was a fifty-year-old. Should she wear a wig and lay very low gray locks, a shawl over her stooping shoulders and say "I'm getting a lot feeble" she should, but as a matter of fact she doesn't. She puts on no dyes the gray hairs, she preserves her figure, she massages away her wrinkles, she uses not a bergamite, if her eyesight is bad she wears daring gowns that make like an older sister to her daughters. And if she is a Parisian woman and also a duchess, she is sure to exclaim "Ma chere" when she is happy. If Mrs. Leslie Carter, a married woman instead of the well preserved middle-aged one, had come in the second act, when she is obliged to make a guilty confession to her son would be too pitiful and unpleasant to witness.

Comparatively few of those who enjoy if or make of the young girls in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" to see how a pigeon-toed, "out at the toes" Rebecca would be received by the theatrical profession for the proper role to fill the different roles. Kate Douglas Wiggin, the author, personally reviewed every one of the little girls that appear in the play. She selected the girls for thorough understand the characteristics as she had conceived them.

"William Hodge is a good actor all right, and a comedian of real talent," said a friend of mine just back from a trip to Europe. "Yes, I think he is pretty good," said his friend. "He makes a hit with me."

"Well, he isn't playing a character. Every tourist who lives West of Ohio and every one in the Middle West is in a butcher's. When he finds somebody who can say English he feels like he has struck oil. Topics. Incidents are lit. Conversation is a thing of the past. Well, he does it on a new refined way. The real tourist sits out his show and refuses to talk the same way entertaining him."

"Well, those fellows are better than you Anglomaniacs," declared the friend and they passed out of hearing.

Program of Interest.

There will be no soloist on the fourteenth Symphony program to be played next Friday afternoon and evening, but Mr. Fiedler has planned on it two important novelties. The first is Beethoven's grand Fugue for string orchestra, opus 133, which will then be played by the Symphony orchestra for the first time. The other novelty will be a symphonic poem by Rimsky-Korsakoff, entitled "Night Ride and Sunrise." This is opus 36, the latest of his published works. The symphony will be Franz Schubert's B minor, which has not been on a program for several seasons, and the other number will be the prelude and "Love Death" from "Tristan and Isolde."

LECTURE ON THE PIANO.

New York Music Critic to Speak in Chickering Hall.

The lecture on "Epochs of Piano M which William J. Henderson, music of the New York Sun, is to give in C ering Hall Tuesday afternoon, February 1 assisted by Olga Samaroff, promises to a musical event of more than ordinary interest. Mr. Henderson's lecture deals with the origin of the piano and its forerunners, the clavichord and its melodious tones, the early piano music and its characteristics, the invention of the square piano and then takes up the polyphonic style of piano composition and its supreme accomplishment in the productions of Bach and Beethoven. After tracing the development of monophonic style, he takes up a method of composition suited to it and its comparison with the devices and technics of the piano. The instrument was played in Bach's time by Couperin and the revolutionary additions of Chopin and Schumann. The music of Liszt and his exploitation of the resources of the piano bring the lecture to a close. Madame Samaroff will play the numbers illustrative of parts of the lecture.

MAN MUST WORK OUT HIS DESTINY

WHEN the Spaniards, under the cruel Pizarro, discovered Peru they found, to their amazement, a civilization equal in many ways to that which they had left behind them in Europe.

Between the old and the new world stretched a vast ocean, a barrier that so far as known had never been passed.

Yet here, in the rugged mountains of tropic South America, in that day as remote from Europe as the planet Mars, was a people toiling upward toward intellectual development, with an almost perfect system of government, a knowledge of the movements of the heavenly bodies, an understanding of architecture and the arts and a profound belief in the Creator.

To the north of Peru, in Mexico, Cortez found another civilization as wonderful as that of the Peruvians, developed without the faintest knowledge of what was going on on the further side of the world.

Intent on their avarice and greed, the Spaniards did not pause to wonder at this miracle. The marvellous fact that the Incas and the Aztecs, ignorant of Europe and ignorant of each other's existence, were quietly working out the destiny of man, progressing, developing, drawing nearer and nearer to real civilization, was, to the morbid minds of the conquerors, of no importance compared to the gold that was to be had for the gathering.

And so, as a hungry hog in a garden destroys the life work of a floriculturist, the Spaniards annihilated this flower of civilization, reducing to ruins the growth and development of thousands of years.

How did it happen that, with an uncrossed sea intervening, the peoples of two worlds were each slowly climbing upward toward civilization?

How did it happen that in America, as in Asia, life first came out of the sea and became varied and developed, till at last a creature was born with reason and the history of the nations of the earth began?

The Peruvians, rising from a state of savagery to a knowledge of government, did not need the example of the Europeans any more than the American-nurtured potato needed the example of the European-born bean to guide it upward.

EACH PEOPLE DEVELOPED BECAUSE THEY COULD NOT LELP IT. Each was compelled by the eternal law of progress to rise out of savagery and climb toward high intelligence.

It would be useless to guess what might have happened had the discovery of America been postponed a thousand years. Yet there is no reason to believe that the people of America would not have continued their upward progress, finally rivalling the Europeans in their institutions and knowledge.

For no man or no nation can stand still. In a world where every form of life has grown out of a lower form, where one age builds on another, as the coral insect builds up the islands of the sea, nothing can be stationary.

When the Goths and the Huns and the Vandals, ignorant barbarians, swept down over the Alps and destroyed the civilization of centuries they checked the progress of the world, but they could not stop it.

On the remains of Rome the people of Europe founded a higher civilization, whose development has been steady to the present day.

Even had the destruction of Rome been complete, had every vestige of learning and art and government been swept from the earth, the race would have begun the upward march again as soon as the disturbers had been exhausted by war.

To-morrow some terrific convulsion might efface all human life from the earth.

But as soon as the face of nature became quiet the certain process of evolution would begin once more, and in tens of thousands of years human life would again appear.

Is it possible to study this astonishing history of development and not believe that man is merely an insignificant instrument in the hands of the Creator?

The engineer looks at the creation he has remodeled the government that he has built up and boasts that he did it.

The philanthropist views the gifts he has made to mankind, the lessons he has taught, and is filled with pride at the work of his hands.

But the philosopher knows that each of them did what he did not because he wanted to, but because he could not help it.

Sir Isaac Newton, discovering the law of gravitation, and giving mechanical thought an impetus that still moves it, was only a part of the eternal Plan which guides the universe.

The same hand that controls the stars in their orbits controls the destiny of the human race, and that destiny must be worked out, no matter how human stupidity may retard it, no matter how avarice and greed and individual ambition may rear obstacles in its way.

You, Mr. Reader, can if you will do much to further the upward march of civilization. Perhaps, if you are as great as Napoleon, you may do a little to hinder it. But your hindering will be of little consequence, however able or gifted you may be, while your help, if it is like that of a Galileo, or a Newton, or a Columbus, may rear a bridge across a thousand years.

In this age, which is one of mechanical progress, we find able men searching the face of the earth, and the depths of the earth, for the treasures that have been laid away in that wonderful storehouse for the use of humanity.

It is less than a hundred years since the world has known anthracite coal. Knowledge of aluminum is barely more than twenty years old. Radium is the discovery of yesterday, and its uses are not yet half understood.

The application of steam to locomotion came to this country after the American Revolution. The telegraph is newer still, and the telephone, whose use is now almost universal, has seen barely a quarter of a century of use.

In all these things have earnest, thoughtful men helped on the development of their race, furthered the great and unfathomable Plan of the Creator of all Things.

In an earlier day Washington and Franklin and Jefferson and Paine were doing for the intellectual development of Americans what the engineers of to-day are doing for their comfort and convenience.

There was a greater work, for they taught men to think. The idea of the divinity of kings was hard to eradicate. Even Cromwell had not succeeded in doing it, for the monarchy he had abolished was soon restored.

Long and patiently the leaders of thought in the pre-Revolutionary days labored to spread their [illegible] of equality and liberty. It was a tremendous work, but they were wonderful men, and the stupidity and selfishness of a dull English King helped bring their teaching [illegible].

Yet [illegible] Franklin [illegible]. Paine patient [illegible] and eloquent as was Jefferson, the people were slow to trust them, slow to believe that even a malignant and grasping king had not still the right to the loyalty of his American subjects.

Not till King George had exhausted the limits of patience did the teachings of the great Revolutionary leaders bear fruit, and the people rise, as one man, to throw off the hateful yoke of monarchy.

Of course, Washington and his fellows builded better than they knew. Great as they were, they could not foresee the greatness of the nation they were establishing. Each labored patiently and merely, yet each was but a part of that mighty plan which directs the universe, each subject to the law which ordains that, whether or no, human beings must continually progress toward higher things, the mass of humanity, which we call the world, growing better and better the while.

In moving with a great crowd that throngs a city street it is best to be philosophical. We cannot stem that tide; opposing it only brings trouble to ourselves and to others. The only feasible course is to go with it till we can free ourselves from its power.

In this world we are all moving with a current that, contrary to the physical law of gravitation, moves upward.

To idle, to waste our hours, to stand still, is to oppose that current. Despite our puny efforts it will move upward just the same.

It Is Useless to Oppose with His Puny Will the Eternal Law of Progress

It is for a man to choose whether he will assist the progress of his fellows or hinder it by doing nothing but hoard dollars for his own selfish purposes.

But whatever he does—work or idle, help or hinder—the world will still go on, in thought, in development, in understanding of the forces of nature and of the vastly greater force that directs them.

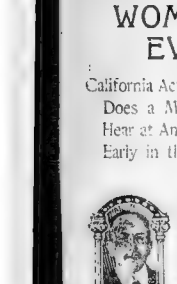
Wonderful as we fancy our civilization of to-day, it will seem but barbarism to the generations to come. Thoughtful men and women, leaders of mankind, will always be instruments in the mighty hand of the Creator to bring His plans to fruition.

And in all the range of ambition there is no object so worthy as that of helping to bring the people of the world nearer their destiny, setting selfishness and greed aside, and working with whatever talents you possess as a part of the Divine Plan of Progress.

ADA LEWIS FUNNIEST WOMAN ALAN DALE EVER INTERVIEWED

California Actress Exceeds the Speed Limit in Talk and Does a Monologue That Is Better Than You Can Hear at Any Vaudeville Theatre, and She Does It All Early in the Morning, Too, While Critic Laughs.

By ALAN DALE.



NEW YORK, Jan 22—This is the joyful story of a woman! I think I ever said. I didn't have to say a word. She said me. She's the funny life with a wa h of ex- cat I may sell ble property o produce. Some of these stories she ori- d luminably, and I was in such a merry ood when it was all over that the day seemed brighter.

She was more like a spring mattress for me—buoyant, resilient and gloweringly full of youth to make up for my own deficiencies.

Miss Ada Lewis received me. A few books that looked as though they had been read, a few pictures that certainly meant something, and the aspect of intimate life was my eyes. It was a bedroom—a bedroom in a rut-ridden hotel; the "neighborhood" was the unfashionable region in West Fifty-second street, and many board and bone-fed dogs in a shabby whole.

She went on in a manner that a professional actor might envy. She had been in the profession since the days of the limelight after I had left it, and I had been in it for a good many years—long enough to be envious," she gayly said, walk right into my biting stride," without taking my notice ever.

Miss Lewis asked me to sit on her bed. I did but I spoke. Oh, no? All right, if she was to be over, and I'm a and spoke. She was not used to interviewers, and though she said that I was a big man physically, I could see that I was not a terrifying object to her. She was so big, and so very, very human. She was a woman, and well, I don't know what else. She was a big baby, I believe, and I'm not sure that she didn't like me. I'm not sure that I didn't like her. I'm sure that I would like her if she would only let me. I'm sure that I would like her if she would only let me.

Nothing Blue About Her.

MAN MUST WORK OUT HIS DESTINY

WHEN the Spaniards, under the cruel Pizarro, discovered Peru they found, to their amazement, a civilization equal in many ways to that which they had left behind them in Europe.

Between the old and the new world stretched a vast ocean, a barrier that so far as known had never been passed.

Yet here, in the rugged mountains of tropic South America, in that day as remote from Europe as the planet Mars, was a people toiling upward toward intellectual development, with an almost perfect system of government, a knowledge of the movements of the heavenly bodies, an understanding of architecture and the arts and a profound belief in the Creator.

To the north of Peru, in Mexico, Cortez found another civilization as wonderful as that of the Peruvians, developed without the faintest knowledge of what was going on on the further side of the world.

Intent on their avarice and greed, the Spaniards did not pause to wonder at this miracle. The marvellous fact that the Incas and the Aztecs, ignorant of Europe and ignorant of each other's existence, were quietly working out the destiny of man, progressing, developing, drawing nearer and nearer to real civilization, was, to the morbid minds of the conquerors, of no importance compared to the gold that was to be had for the gathering.

And so, as a hungry hog in a garden destroys the life work of a floriculturist, the Spaniards annihilated this flower of civilization, reducing to ruins the growth and development of thousands of years.

How did it happen that, with an uncrossed sea intervening, the peoples of two worlds were each slowly climbing upward toward civilization?

How did it happen that in America, as in Asia, life first came out of the sea and became varied and developed, till at last a creature was born with reason and the history of the nations of the earth began?

The Peruvians, rising from a state of savagery to a knowledge of government, did not need the example of the Europeans any more than the American-nurtured potato needed the example of the European-born bean to guide it upward.

EACH PEOPLE DEVELOPED BECAUSE THEY COULD NOT LELP IT. Each was compelled by the eternal law of progress to rise out of savagery and climb toward high intelligence.

It would be useless to guess what might have happened had the discovery of America been postponed a thousand years. Yet there is no reason to believe that the people of America would not have continued their upward progress, finally rivalling the Europeans in their institutions and knowledge.

For no man or no nation can stand still. In a world where every form of life has grown out of a lower form, where one age builds on another, as the coral insect builds up the islands of the sea, nothing can be stationary.

When the Goths and the Huns and the Vandals, ignorant barbarians, swept down over the Alps and destroyed the civilization of centuries they checked the progress of the world, but they could not stop it.

On the remains of Rome the people of Europe founded a higher civilization, whose development has been steady to the present day.

Even had the destruction of Rome been complete, had every vestige of learning and art and government been swept from the earth, the race would have begun the upward march again as soon as the disturbers had been exhausted by war.

To-morrow some terrific convulsion might efface all human life from the earth.

But as soon as the face of nature became quiet the certain process of evolution would begin once more, and in tens of thousands of years human life would again appear.

Is it possible to study this astonishing history of development and not believe that man is merely an insignificant instrument in the hands of the Creator?

The conqueror looks upon the nation he has crushed, the government and he has built up and boasts that he did it.

The philanthropist views the gifts he has made to mankind, the lessons he has taught, and is filled with pride at the work of his hands.

But the philosopher knows that each of them did what he did, not because he wanted to, but because he could not help it.

Sir Isaac Newton, discovering the law of gravitation, and giving mechanical thought an impetus that still moves it, was only a part of the eternal Plan which guides the universe.

THE DOTTY DIALOGUES

By WEX JONES.

"I SORRY," said Binks, "that they arrested a man in New York for allowing his four-year-old son to count in Greek contests."

"Why shouldn't they?" retorted Jinks. "I'll bet that if Socrates had gone around in trousers and a stiff straw hat in the Greeks would have pinched him for disturbing the streets in Athens."

"No that isn't the same thing," said Binks. "In pursuits of that kind they arrested Socrates because the law was cold, although he himself thought that he was warm. What I say is that no man should have his child arrested for cruelty to his parents."

"I think old man should be allowed the freedom of country in which he lives," said Jinks.

"Yes, I know, but I'm talking about the freedom of the individual," said Binks. "Suppose a man's wife and children are starving, and he is out of work, and he can't get any work to do, and he has no money to buy food with, and he goes and steals a loaf of bread, and is arrested and sent to jail for it. Wouldn't you say that he was justified in stealing the bread?"

"Why, of course," said Jinks, "and I'd say that the judge who sentenced him ought to be impeached."

"Well, you see," said Binks, "that's the way I feel about it. I don't see why a man should be arrested for teaching his children to count in Greek, or Latin, or Hebrew, or any other language, for that matter. Once of these days I'm going to have a child of my own, and I'm going to teach him to count in Greek, and I'm going to teach him to count in Latin, and I'm going to teach him to count in Hebrew, and I TELL YOU, JORDAN, MY COUSIN WILLIE IS A SMART MAN: HE HEARD THERE ARE BURGLARS AROUND HERE AND HE'S GOT THE SHERIFF OUT IN THE YARD LAYING FOR 'EM!
WELL, GOOD NIGHT
THERE HE GOES, SHERIFF.
I SEE HIM
STOP, IN THE NAME OF THE LAW!
HALT OR I'LL FIRE!
GRAB HIM, SHERIFF!
DON'T LET HIM GET AWAY
WHICH WAY DID HE GO, SHERIFF?
HE'S RUNNING UP THE BACK STAIRS
STOP, YOU'RE UNDER ARREST!
I COMMAND YOU TO HALT!
HOLD HIM SHERIFF, I'M COMING!
DID HE COME THROUGH HERE AGAIN!
YES:
JORDAN YOU SURPRISE ME!
AND IF YOU EVER COME THROUGH HERE AGAIN I'LL BREAK EVERY BONE IN YOUR BODY!

Ingenious Arguments of Kaiser Wilhelm's Art Director To Prove He Has Not Bought a Modern English Bust Made of Old Candles for $41,000

The Famous Bust of Flora, Attributed to Leonardo da Vinci or One of His Contemporaries, for Which Dr. Bode Paid $41,000, as It Stands in the Kaiser Friedrich Museum at Berlin Now, Showing Its Antique Beauty Which (Dr. Bode Says) Proves It Could Not Have Been Made by the Nineteenth Century English Sculptor, R. C. Lucas.

THE controversy over the authenticity of the bust of Flora attributed to Leonardo da Vinci in the Royal Museum in Berlin, at [illegible], is the latest art controversy of the moment.

Various English critics offer evidence to prove that the bust was made by a nineteenth century English artist, of old wax candles. Dr. Bode, who bought the bust, asserts positively that it is by Leonardo or one of the great artists of the Renaissance and was dirt cheap at the price of $41,000, which he paid for it.

Dr. Wilhelm Bode, director of the Kaiser Friedrich Museum in Berlin, is the greatest man in the world of art in Germany. He is described as a martyr. Many have envied the favored position of the full confidence of the Emperor William, who [illegible] him with creating [illegible] art [illegible] in Europe.

A famous statue was brought to England. It [illegible] in the museum. Dr. Bode declared [illegible] was [illegible] and [illegible] to [illegible] the Renaissance.

It was [illegible] effort of [illegible] to [illegible] a statue. The [illegible] which [illegible] and it is [illegible] which is of a [illegible] and in the garland of flowers [illegible] the hair. The [illegible] was [illegible] the bust of a young [illegible] Wax Museum at Berlin [illegible] contemporaries of Leonardo.

Dr. Bode [illegible] acquired a [illegible] for his museum that [illegible] it placed it in [illegible] position [illegible] to Leonardo da Vinci [illegible] to him from its [illegible] and the curve of its [illegible] to accord with the other [illegible] pieces of the master—[illegible] "Mona Lisa" [illegible] Angelo [illegible].

[illegible] valuable example [illegible] the bust was known [illegible] in the [illegible] Several [illegible] offered to [illegible] sold [illegible] The Lord [illegible] finally [illegible] museum [illegible] a [illegible] work of [illegible] Nevertheless [illegible] time that it was [illegible] fifteenth century [illegible] it had reappeared a few years ago at a public sale near Southampton in England where it had been sold for only $15. The [illegible] passing [illegible] and [illegible] experts [illegible] of [illegible] in [illegible] Murray Marks.

The [illegible] were really [illegible] to [illegible] Dora Lucas [illegible] Bode, of Southampton, confirmed the statement of Cooksey, and said that his father [illegible] thing attributed to Leonardo da Vinci, a "Flora," which was [illegible] him by William Buist [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] is [illegible] Buist [illegible].

When Dora Lucas was [illegible] father's possession [illegible] R. C. Lucas [illegible] eighty years [illegible] and [illegible] eighty-one made a copy [illegible] which the Illustrated London News published. Some time after [illegible] M. Richman asked the [illegible] if [illegible] would be possible to make a [illegible] was [illegible] painting attributed to Leonardo. The elder Lucas [illegible] William Barrow, R.A. went to work from the copy made by his son, who assisted him in preparing the wax. Old ends of wax candles supplied the material. That was about 1847 and on the death of the old sculptor, in 1858, the bust was not accepted by the [illegible] customer who ordered it. R. C. Lucas [illegible] tired of trying to sell it [illegible] annoyed to bumper with [illegible] In the stone [illegible] In his stone yard [illegible] He was [illegible] to put some drapery [illegible] nude statue in public. At this period, when the bust was thus draped, some ways [illegible] one took a photograph of it which [illegible] today in the album of an old friend [illegible].

WHAT THE CRITICS SAY AGAINST THE BUST:

1—It was made by a 19th Century Englishman named R. C. Lucas.

2—An old photograph shows the bust as it was in Lucas's possession.

6—The bust was stuffed by Lucas with an early Victorian bedquilt.

7—The Renaissance artists did not make colored wax busts.

8—Lucas had a remarkable talent for copying antiques; but this bust shows evidences of modern style.

9—The bust once in Lucas's possession is exactly the same as the Berlin bust.

10—The antique appearance of the bust is due to its exposure to the weather by Lucas.

WHAT DR. BODE SAYS IN DEFENCE OF IT:

1—Lucas was greatly incapable of creating such a beautiful work.

2—This photograph shows another bust which Lucas probably made from the Berlin bust.

3—Lucas's son is 81 years old and has probably confused restoration and creation.

4—Cooksey is confused, or possibly a liar.

5—Analysis of the wax shows it to be the same as that used by the Renaissance artists.

6—That does not prove that Lucas made the bust.

7—Works in colored wax by Verrocchio and other contemporaries of Leonardo have been found.

8—It shows the style of a Renaissance artist in every respect; particularly in the resemblance of the exquisitely subtle smile to Leonardo's "Gioconda."

9—It is not the same. The Lucas bust was not colored and there are other differences.

10—The injuries sustained by the Berlin bust are not due to weather, but to rough handling.

THE LUCAS-LEONARDO CONTROVERSY: PART OF A WOOLEN COVERLET OF EARLY VICTORIAN DATE (STRIPPED TO SHOW) USED TO COVER IN THE "LEONARDO DA VINCI WAX BUST" NOW IN BERLIN.

It will be recalled that Mr. A. D. Lucas stated some while ago that his father R. C. Lucas, was in the habit of economizing wax when making works in wax by stuffing the interior of those works with pieces of cloth and whatnot. It was learned therefore with the greatest interest that there had been extracted by Dr. Bode from the supposed Leonardo wax bust now in Berlin (which many argue is the work of the nineteenth century English sculptor R. C. Lucas) a piece of bed-covering of the R. C. Lucas period. Dr. Bode suggests that the material was placed in the bust by Lucas when he restored the bust.

The piece of bed quilt was submitted to the director of the Victoria and Albert Museum, London, the leading authority on the subject, who issued the following statement:

"In the opinion of the officer in charge of the department of textiles, the piece of fabric inclosed is a portion of a woven coverlet of early Victorian date."

Dr. Bode says the position of the bust in the old photograph is stiffer than in the Berlin bust; the neck is longer and thicker, the head is differently [illegible] the pose [illegible] on the shoulders, the left [illegible] further removed. The [illegible] much more carefully carried out, and in harder manner.

The bust made by Lucas was not colored. This is proved by the photograph now in the possession of Dr. Bode. The two busts vary altogether with regard to position of the arms. In the Berlin bust the left arm was extended far away from the body, but in Lucas's bust it is chiefly placed behind [illegible] the old portrait [illegible] The statements of [illegible] son and others who had to be relied on by Dr. Bode. Forty-two years passed since the bust was handled by [illegible]. Is it not likely that they had confused a bust given to R. C. Lucas to be restored with an original [illegible]

THE NEWEST MIRACLE OF MODERN PROGRESS.

New York to San Francisco in Less Than One Day in a Gigantic, Three-Story Monorail Car.

By August Scherl,
Inventor of the German Monorail Car.

THE toy stores sell a little top called a "gyroscope." Everybody has seen it: whatever way you start it spinning it wants to keep right on spinning in the same way, and it resists your efforts if you try to interfere with it. The little gyroscope top illustrates a principle of physics which all scientists have understood for many years.

Now, the scientific principle upon which this little top pushes back your hand when you try to tip it over has been ingeniously applied to modern travel, with results which are about as surprising as any of the miracles of olden times. This little gyroscope top, built, of course, on a huge scale, prevents a steamship from rolling at sea.

Showing Position of Gyroscope Wheels in Car.

This same obstinate gyroscope, which will not allow you to upset it, is being applied to aeroplanes, and it is claimed that the problem of the balancing of flying machines, so that they will not tip over in the air, is about to be solved.

But perhaps the most interesting, most important, most far-reaching and most fascinatingly interesting miracle of the application of the gyroscope is to railroad travel.

We think of a railroad car as being about ten feet wide and thirty feet long, and of course it must have two rails for the wheels to run on. A railroad car ought not to be higher in the air than is necessary for reasonable head room and ventilation, and we know from practical railroad operation that about seventy miles an hour is as fast as it is safe to drive a railroad train. When cars go faster than seventy miles an hour, there is a tendency for the wheels to raise up and ride over the top of the rails.

But the little gyroscope has pointed out a way to escape from all these limitations.

The railroad car of the future will be thirty feet wide—once and a half as wide as the average city house. This car will be 200 feet long—the entire length of an average city block, and it will be three stories high.

This future railroad car will carry as many passengers, as much baggage and as much mail as several express trains of the present day, and the gyroscope car will travel 200 miles an hour and perhaps much more.

And the most curious thing about the future railroad is that its cars will all travel on a single rail, stand up right, perfectly balanced, always adjusting themselves to sharp curves, permitting all the passengers and baggage to be shifted from side to side, and yet never tipping over!

Ocean Steamship With Gyroscope Equipment, and Present Rolling Motion of Ship and How It Will Be Steadied.

And all this is made possible by applying to modern transportation a simple principle of physics which has been before the eyes of the scientific world for generations. This is no mere theory or theoretical proposition. It has already been thoroughly well demonstrated in actual practice.

At the present moment there are, in two different parts of the world, two entirely working illustrations of the entirely satisfactory operation at high speed of cars which run on a single rail. One of these monorailroads is running in Berlin, Germany, under the inventions and the other is running in Ireland, operated by the inventor, Louis Brennan. And there is to be a monorailroad will soon be seen [illegible]

I will try to explain [illegible] manner as possible, and without [illegible] explanations why the gyroscope [illegible] at any angle at which it is started. For I think you will be able to see how it is that the gyro-car can balance itself on one rail even though not in motion and can also round a curve at tremendous speed without tipping over.

There are some things we have to take on faith in this world and among these are the laws of nature. There are certain laws that exist. We can't dispute them. They are [illegible] that is all. For instance, we expect a ball rolling on a level surface. The ball continues to roll in a straight line. That sounds rather simple perhaps, but it is a fact of nature that any body in motion tends to remain in motion and in the same general direction until acted upon by some other force or body.

That's why a train is liable to jump the track at a sharp curve. The train is running along at a fast clip and, according to the law of nature I have just quoted, tends to continue in that direction, so that when it strikes the curve the car lurches over in that direction, but it is held to the rails by the flanges on the wheels. If the flanges didn't hold, the train would continue in the direction it had been going. As it is, the car lurches and the top of the car leans over in that direction.

Now, the underlying principle of the gyroscope top or the gyro-car is just as simple, but you have to take on faith one law of nature, and that is this—any wheel once set spinning persists with all its power in spinning in one plane. You start a gyroscope top spinning at one angle, say of 45 degrees, and it insists on continuing to spin at that angle. The little thing points obstinately in one direction, and if you press against it you feel it pressing back with almost human resentment, and with a strength like that of a powerful magnet.

If you start one of these tops spinning in a vertical direction it will continue spinning at that angle, and when I speak of the top spinning I refer to the inner part of the top, not the outer, enclosing circle, which remains stationary.

Now, then, I have taken the principle that underlies this child's plaything, this toy that has been widely sold simply because it puzzled people, and applied it to the car. I figured like this: If that top can hold to a vertical position in spite of adverse force, why can't a much larger top, fastened to the inside of a car, hold the car upright with it?

I tried it. I put two of these large tops, or balancing wheels, as we call them, side by side in a car, put the car on a rail set the tops spinning by some motive power and there the car stood as straight as it on two rails.

So great is the power of these two big gyroscope tops, or balancing wheels, that when the car hits a curve it still keeps the car upright, for, as the car tends to careen over, the swiftly revolving wheels force down the inner side of the car, resisting the upward tendency of that side of the car just as the tiny top resents any effort to change its angle while in motion.

In the same way the car is kept at an equilibrium even though every person in it be sitting on one side of it. Let every one sit on one side of the car and the tendency would be for that side to go down and the other side to go up, but as soon as the other side starts to go up the energy from the revolving tops, or wheels, presses it down firmly and keeps the floor of the car level.

And that's all there is to the mystery of the gyro-car. Why, men will be able to play billiards in one of these cars going around a curve at the rate of three miles a minute, so smoothly will it run and so precisely will it keep its equilibrium. Children may build castles of blocks securely in a rushing gyro-car as they can on the floor of the nursery at home.

The advantages of the car are almost without number. First there is the matter of expense. For one thing it will no longer be necessary to build great railroad bridges. All that will be needed is a strong cable, and I predict that before long you people here in New York will see gyro-trains running over the East River alongside the great Brooklyn Bridge on just a cable.

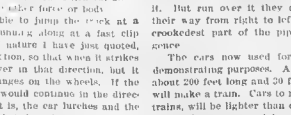
Just think of spanning a great expanse of water like that with a "bridge" that takes but a night to erect. It is no dream; no fantasy. It is far more easy to credit than the telephone or the wireless telegraph.

Instead of subways dug beneath cities at great expense, noiseless elevated trains of gyro-cars can be run. Through the middle of the streets strong cables can be strung at little comparative expense, and along these cables the trains can run at high speed as noiseless as a snake. Your great New York Subway will then look like a relic of the old days.

Over canyons, over rivers, across country impassable for the trains of to-day these mono-rail trains will run. Not only the steam roads, but trolley lines will be supplanted. The comparative low cost of operation and construction and the facility and speed of road construction will soon result in a network of lines both in the city and country.

There is nothing that can tip these cars over. No wind is strong enough, no adverse force of any kind sufficient to cause it to deviate one iota from its equilibrium.

We have subjected the car to all sorts of unique but severe tests. We have run it over a cable and with our hands swayed the cable, but the car stood firm. We have pushed against the side of the car and struck it with heavy blows; we have taken great weights and dropped them on the extreme edge of the car and that side of the car actually rose a little under the sudden load.



Gyroscope Applied to an Aeroplane.

We made a track of a length of gas pipe lying loose upon the ground, so crooked and full of kinks and sharp bends that it seemed absurd to expect wheels to run over it. But run over it they did, and rapidly, too; picking their way from right to left, up and down, following the crookedest part of the pipe with almost human intelligence.

The cars now used for experiments are merely for demonstrating purposes. A full-sized car will probably be about 200 feet long and 30 feet in width. Five or six cars will make a train. Cars to run on cables, such as elevated trains, will be lighter than cars on regular through trains, for the latter may weigh as much as 100 tons.

The gyroscope wheels in a full sized car will be about 4½ feet in diameter and will weigh about two tons each.

They will make 8,000 revolutions a minute, although half that number I believe will be sufficient to maintain the equilibrium of a car.

But suppose the gyroscope wheels should stop? you will ask. We have made every possible provision to meet that contingency. These wheels are in a vacuum enclosure. If the power should be cut off these wheels, from their own momentum, would continue to revolve two or three days, there being no air resistance. The revolutions would be fast enough to keep the car upright for several hours at least. In case one wheel broke completely, the other wheel would be sufficient to keep the car up, and if both should break, which is about as likely as a second flood, four little uprights will drop down from the four corners of the car to the ground and thus hold the car in an upright position.

If both wheels should break while the train was going over a cable then there would be an accident, but this possibility is so remote as to make it too absurd for consideration.

The cars are to be built of nameled steel, and vestibuled. The surfaces of the cars are to be perfectly smooth to eliminate all friction from the air, and the forward end of the first car is to be torpedo shaped.

Any power can be used to propel the cars. Electricity, gasoline or benzine. We find the last very practicable.

Reflect upon the luxury and comfort afforded by this means of travel! Cars thirty feet wide, more than three times the width of Pullmans, will furnish quarters as spacious as a drawing room. Furthermore, there will be no more long, tedious week journeys, for the trains will go from New York to San Francisco in a day and a night, and maybe in less time.

The fastest train ever run, and that was an experiment, was at the rate of 120 miles an hour. Any such rate of speed as this is impossible in every day railroading. Every time a train should run at this speed the rails, ties and bolts would have to be examined, and no rails could hold such a fast speeding train on a curve of any angle at all. One rail is better than two, anyway, for then there is no danger of spreading rails. Under the double rail system the rails must be absolutely parallel. If one of the rails dips a trifle, a fast moving train is apt to rock violently and jump the track. The flanges of the monorail car wheels are deep, and there is no tendency for them to leave the rail.

The revolutions to be bought about soon by the introduction of the gyro-car is not speculation, not the fruit of a vivid imagination. It is an absolute assurance based upon proven scientific principles and demonstrated tests.

In all probability electricity will be the motive power used to propel the cars. You understand the revolutions of the gyroscope wheels have nothing to do with the propulsion of the car itself. There will be two distinct missions for the electric current—one to propel the car, the other to induce the revolutions of the gyroscope wheels.

There will be power stations along the road for the generation of the electricity, and the cars will pick up the current either by trolley or by a third rail, probably the latter. Inasmuch as the motion of the gyroscope wheels have no influence upon the propulsion of the car, the car can move backward or forward with equal facility and speed.

You can plainly see that the cost of construction of a monorail system will be far less than the prevailing double track system. On a level stretch it will be less than half, and where, in making curves, a double track road has to be banked, the margin of saving will be even greater. When you consider that it costs from $80,000 to $25,000 a mile for present railway construction, and even more where there is difficult surface to be negotiated, the sum total of saving impresses you.

In the cost of maintenance is where the greatest saving will come. Nine-tenths of the money now expended in repairing rails, substituting bolts, and in maintaining a horde of trackwalkers, will be eliminated. There will be but one rail to watch, one rail to keep in repair, and less money needed to keep this rail in repair than one of the two rails now used. If the monorail sags a little, it will not have to be replaced right away, whereas now it does, for in a double track system the rails must be plumb and parallel.

Whereas the roads of to-day rarely can be built with grades steeper than 4 per cent, we expect to be able to negotiate 20-70 grades. Making grades is, of course, largely a matter of propelling power, but with the gyro-car there is less track resistance and less air resistance, and we can consequently make steeper grades than the trains of to-day with the same amount of power.

What sort of brakes will be used? If the engineer sees some obstacle on the track, how is he going to stop his train if he's going 200 miles an hour? We shall use, probably, compressed air brakes. As to the difficulty of stopping such a fast moving train, I would say that if you try to stop a 60-mile train too suddenly you'll pile the passengers up. A gyro train can be stopped just as easily as any train, although going at that speed it couldn't be brought to a stop quite so quickly. It has been proven by experiment that a train moving at the rate of 100 miles an hour can be stopped within 500 yards without injury to train or passengers. A gyro train, at a 200 mile gait, could be stoped in about 750 yards with use of brakes and reversal of power.

By reason of increased speed and ability to make curves at top speed, gyro-trains will be able to make circuitous routes around hills and mountains in the same time it takes the train of to-day to go through them. Of course, if the cars are made as wide as I think they will be, thirty feet or so, present tunnels will have to be enlarged, if the circuitous route is not adopted.

In the matter of cable extensions of the road, care will have to be taken against too much sagging of the cable between the uprights.

The practicability of monorail transportation is an established fact. The limit of its possibilities no mind can predict. From New York to San Francisco in less than a 24-hour day is certainly a reasonable prediction.

An Old, But Simple, Law of Nature Applied to Travel Which Will Keep Ocean Liners from Rolling, Airships from Tipping Over and Will Give Us a Huge Railroad Car as Big as a Hotel, Running 200 Miles an Hour Balanced on a Single Rail.

Scientific Explanation of the Gyrostat.

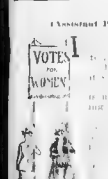
WHY MODEST, DIFFIDENT, RETIRING WOMEN SUDDENLY BECOME BOLD, MILITANT SUFFRAGETTES

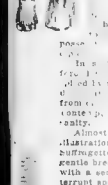
Professor Rice Explains the Psychology of the Curious Anomaly of Ladies of Gentle Breeding Who Shrink from a Dispute with a Servant—Yet Interrupt Public Meetings, Fight With Policemen and Cheerfully Expose Themselves to Shocking Indignities.

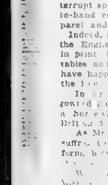
"As Mr. Churchill alighted from a tram with his wife the Suffragette . . . brought down her lash on the Minister's head."

Penelope Stanlaws

By DAVID EDGAR RICE,
Assistant Professor of Psychology in Columbia University.

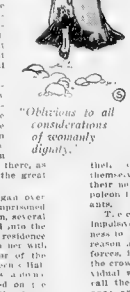






"Their chief desire seems to be to have themselves sent to jail."

"Oblivious to all considerations of womanly dignity."



"Found the guillotiners his most docile servants."

"Just as the Lord Mayor began his toast to the King, . . . two Suffragettes threw stones through the stained glass windows."

The Suffragette movement we have . . . of the working of what is . . . and the peculiarities of the crowd . . . its most especially in the form in which it . . . in England, we see a crowd of good . . . behaved, as the word . . . is understood, while ostensibly contending for a principle which in all ages has inspired . . . supreme heroism and self- . . . sharing in the govern- . . . which they are forced to live. This . . . civil and political liberty has been the . . . achievements which the hi- . . . men produce, and has provided . . . being those of the world's most persuasive . . . In fact, the characterization "truly great" by common consent restricted almost exclusively . . . who have sacrificed their energies, their . . . in support of this great prin- . . .

In short, the militant suffragettes who are . . . and working for the same ends, . . . of action so far . . . from . . . tion, expresses them to ridicule and . . . contempt, even those as to doubt their . . . sanity.

Almost every day the cable dispatches bring us fresh illustrations of the acts of violence or folly in which these suffragettes indulge. Women of aristocratic birth and gentle breeding, who would probably shrink from a dispute with a servant in their own homes, do not hesitate to interrupt speakers in public meetings or to engage in hand-to-hand conflicts with policemen, regardless of their apparel and their dignity as well.

Indeed, many shocking indignities have been suffered by the English Suffragettes which have never been mentioned in print. Ladies of birth and position have been laid across tables and roundly spanked and some of the things which have happened to the young women who have been put in the . . . among themselves.

In . . . a month ago, a richly . . . ment by name armed with . . . well-known member of the British . . . Churchill.

As Mr. . . . from a train with his wife, the "suffra- . . . police line on the station plat- . . . form, be- . . . minister's head, and . . .

W . . . her offense, . . . of being humiliated by . . . on in which it . . . was proud of . . . of resenting in . . . this done to her . . . Would . . . them the right of . . . owed her . . . of treating all . . .

"Their chief desire seems to be to have themselves sent to jail."

. . . During the . . . which the incident occurred, a banquet was . . . in connection with the inauguration of the new Lord Mayor of London, was the scene of . . . as the Lord Mayor Beaufoy . . . of many officials of the army and the navy, many members of the Diplomatic Corps, and the representatives of foreign countries. . . . proof of the . . . through the stained glass windows of the hall in which the banquet was being held.

By far the most astonishing feature of these demonstrations is to be found in the fact that they are planned and executed not by mobs made up of individuals from the . . . of society, but, on the contrary, by women of women many belong to the very best families in the land. We might not be much surprised to find such incidents occurring among other peoples of Europe, as the French or Italians, whose impulsiveness is their chief characteristic, but in England, where the . . . of womanhood and respect for law have . . . their bodily development, such things are wholly unlooked of.

A few months ago a company of sixty volunteers for dangerous duty, representing the Women's Freedom League, attempted to force Premier Asquith in order to present to him a resolution adopted by that body. They were met and resisted by squads of policemen, mounted and on foot, and the clash resulted in the rough handling of many of the women, and the arrest of twenty-four of their number. Among those who were arrested and sentenced to prison were Lady Constance Lytton, sister of Lord Lytton, and daughter of a former Viceroy of India; Miss Stratford Dugdale, daughter of Commander Dugdale, of the British navy; Miss Solomon, daughter of the ex-Premier of Cape Colony, and Mrs. Pethick Lawrence, the wife of a wealthy Devonshire merchant. Mrs. Lawrence is the treasurer of the Militant Society of Suffragists, and this imprisonment was the second she has undergone in her zeal for the cause.

It is a matter of fixed principle with these women that they refuse to avail themselves of any means which will save themselves from imprisonment. In fact, their chief desire seems to be to have themselves sent to jail. In a speech made to a crowd of Suffragettes who preceded her upon her release from . . . ment, Mrs. Lawrence urged all her adherents who had not yet been in Holloway Jail to make an effort to serve a term there, as this would constitute their best preparation for the great work in which they were engaged.

It is estimated that since this movement began over five hundred women have been arrested and imprisoned for various . . . On one occasion, several women were found . . . of throwing ink into the ballot boxes at a parliamentary election. The private residence of Premier Asquith was stoned while he was at dinner with his family. Other records, while the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Lloyd George, was riding to Queen's Hall to make a speech, . . . pelted . . . and . . . and a companion locked the door and stood on the footboard of the car. The woman which gave the Chancellor a good shaking, it is . . . by striking him and pouring Suffragist arguments into . . . ears.

These women have even invaded the sacred precincts of the Parliament with their demands of "votes for women," chaining themselves to the galleries to prevent their forcible removal by the police.

In prison they show . . . determination . . . female wardens with . . . and nails . . . In the determination to starve themselves in spite . . . of the prison officials to feed them with stomach pumps. In some cases the . . . such extremes that the wardens were compelled . . . then, through sheer inability to . . .

When we come to analyze the peculiar mental condition of these women, in which they are made apparently oblivious to all considerations of womanly dignity and personal comfort, and are driven into such abnormal conduct as has been cited, we find an interesting illustration of the way in which an individual will allow his personality to be swallowed up in what may be called the consciousness of a crowd or party.

It is a matter of common observation that in certain situations large groups of people will act in a manner very different from that in which any of the individuals composing a crowd would act in isolation. The horrible panics which frequently occur at large assemblies upon sudden alarms of fire, and the . . . of the American . . . are striking . . . of this fact. . . . unfortunately . . . [illegible] . . . under . . . circumstances . . . a whole crowd . . . about to . . . impulse . . . have the power to . . . impulses which any one . . . individuals would . . . but immediately . . . be a true . . .

The famous . . . Le Bon, who has made a profound study of the psychology of the crowd, points . . . remarkable . . . in these words:

"Whoever be the individuals that compose the crowd, . . . their mode of life their occupations, their character or their intelligence, the fact that they have been transformed into a crowd puts them in possession of a sort of collective mind which makes them feel, think and act in a manner quite different from that in which each of them individually would feel, think and act were he in a state of isolation. There are certain ideas and feelings which do not come into being, or do not transform themselves into acts except in the case of individuals forming a crowd.

"The psychological crowd is a provisional being formed of heterogeneous elements, which, for the moment, are combined, exactly as the cells which constitute a living body form by their reunion a new being which displays characteristics very different from those possessed by each of the cells singly. This explains how it was that among the most savage members of the French Convention were to be found inoffensive citizens, who, under ordinary circumstances, would have been peaceable notaries or . . . magistrates. Taken separately, these men were enlightened citizens of peaceful habits. United in a crowd they did not hesitate to give their consent to the most savage proposals, to . . . individuals most clearly . . . and, even . . . contrary to their own interests, to renounce . . . their . . . and to decimate themselves. The storm past, they resumed their normal character of quiet, law abiding citizens. Napoleon found among the guillotiners his most docile servants.

"To . . . such . . . of such crowds are their . . . impulsiveness, irritability, inability to . . . and . . . ness to accept any suggestion. In short we may say that reason disappears . . . and the lowest psychological forces, impulse and emotion, dominate. This condition of the crowd is exactly analogous to the condition of an individual who is brought under hypnotic control. What we call the conscious will is for the time in abeyance, and personality is lost. We have a reversion to the primitive conditions of mental life, such as we may assume prevailed in the human mind before the development of reason.

In bringing about this peculiar transformation, two important factors are involved. These are the loss of personal responsibility which naturally accompanies the absorption of the individual into the crowd, and the feeling of unlimited power which comes from numbers.

The sense of personal responsibility and inherent limitations which . . . alone are the two considerations which . . . all others dispose a man to give a check to his natural impulses. By bitter experience he has learned that unrestrained yielding to instinctive tendencies and passions brings disaster in its train. These experiences he holds in memory, and when the same impulses present themselves again, these memory ideas oppose them and rob them of their power. This is reason. Let these memory ideas lose their power and unreasonable and rash conduct is the natural result.

Now this is exactly what happens to the majority of individuals who make up the crowd. With all sense of personal responsibility swept away, they yield themselves an easy prey to their instinctive tendencies, and accept any suggestions. The law says . . . either follow the lead of the crowd or withdraw themselves from it.

Thus it happens that the crowd is always intellectually inferior to the individuals who compose it. And yet, notwithstanding this inferiority, crowds are capable of supreme heroism as well as of acts of violence and cruelty. All depends upon the character of the suggestions to which they are exposed.

On this point Le Bon well says: "It is crowds rather than isolated individuals that may be induced to run the risk of death to secure the triumph of a . . . or an idea, that may be fired with enthusiasm for glory and honor, that are led on—almost without bread and without arms, as in the age of the Crusade—to deliver the tomb of Christ from the infidels, or, as in '92, to defend the Fatherland. Such heroism is without doubt unconscious, but it is of more heroism that history is made. We . . . to be credited only with the great actions performed in cold blood, the annals of the world would reckon but few of them."

It is, then, the principle of susceptibility . . . suggestion prevailing among a group of individuals under the influence of strong emotions that we are able to find . . . a partial explanation of the violent conduct in which the English suffragettes engage. The instincts and . . . erotism of crowds are identical, no matter what may be the purpose which brings them together. Hence it is never safe to judge of the motive or . . . principle merely from the conduct of those supporting it.

For . . . of suffrage for women, originating as it did in the minds of such excellent women as Susan B. Anthony and Elizabeth Cady Stanton, at least can claim a worthy . . . source. At the present day it is receiving the support of many leaders of the world's thought, and therefore commands respect, notwithstanding the violent conduct of some of its adherents.

The history of all great social and political movements shows that ahead of every important . . . advance . . . who in many cases apparently . . . do . . . but . . . in the end. Instead of . . . contributing . . . to the progress of the cause they espouse, they seem only to bring upon it ridicule and contempt.

John Brown's abortive attempts to free the Southern slaves and induce them to rise in rebellion against their masters seemed absurd to the highest degree. Yet he is generally conceded . . . the incident for which he was responsible was the one thing above all others that aroused popular interest in the situation and brought it to a crisis.

Carrie Nation with her little hatchet apparently served no more useful purpose than to afford amusement to the country in connection with the temperance movement, and yet the few years that followed her appearance have brought for the cause of temperance the greatest victories it has ever achieved.

It is of course difficult in any case to say whether these apparently misguided individuals actually made any valuable contributions to the advancement of the movements they sought to help, or whether they served merely as straws to indicate the direction in which the wind had already begun to blow, but even in the latter capacity they are not without their interest and value.

So it is with the English suffragettes.

My Secrets of Beauty

No. 56—Beauty of Expression

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri—the Most Famous Living Beauty

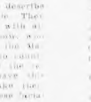
"Use dental floss, getting carefully out from between all teeth any particles of food lodging there."

MME. Cavalieri to-day handles ably the topic "Beauty of Expression." She says that by some it is regarded as "the first essential of loveliness," and that she herself "does not rank it lower than second in importance to beauty of features."

Mme. Cavalieri alludes to the national tendency of American women to make "monkey faces" when they smile, and she warns them that they smile not too often, but "too much," that is "with all their features."

As usual the beautiful prima donna publishes valuable recipes for the improvement of beauty.

Next week she will write on "The Model Toilet Table."



By Mme. Lina Cavalieri.

BEAUTY of expression is regarded by some as the first essential of loveliness. Certainly it does not rank lower than second in importance to beauty of features, by which I mean classic regularity of facial outline.

A woman should study her face to ascertain her best expression and try to make that habitual. As a rule, we look our worst when we study our faces in the mirror. With souls ourselves for audiences all light seems to pass out of our faces, leaving them as expressionless as the face of a corpse. To do ourselves justice in these studies and as study-inspiring as we may, learn to pose before the mirror. We must bring before ourselves the reflection of our faces as they look when animated by conversation, or when dealing in thought or in action with the problems of every day.

One of the first questions for a woman to decide before her mirror is whether she looks best when smiling or serious. Most faces are improved by a smile. A few are curse-lined by it. If you happen to be one of the latter it is your duty to your personal environment of charm to cultivate a sweetly serious expression.

I would ill become me to criticise American women when I have so many friends among them, and have gathered from their looks such charming audiences and hundred thousands of readers. But I can say to them collectively, as I have said to some of my personal friends in kindly confession, that they have certain national peculiarities, and that one of them is the tendency to make what I cannot better describe than "monkey faces" when they smile. They smile too much, not too often, but with an inane facility. Women of Latin blood never have faces as saintly beautiful as the Madonna's, break that perfect calm into countless wrinkles when they smile. Even the revealing mirror show that they have the habit, they would do well to make their smile as infrequent as possible. Those facial earthquakes rifting the features into cross-crevasses utterly destroy their beauty for the time.

The smile, according to the individual type, should be like the play of sunshine across a surface of snow. The features should be nearly immovable. Mobile exercise of the features is vulgar. Also, it is quite according to my canons of beauty that the face should be passive. The smile should be a modest, swift illumination, registered by eyes and mouth. They are the most eloquent and should be permitted to discharge their functions unaided.

A swift lighting and rising, a seeming of the eyes, a relaxing of the lips, showing the five teeth that Phrenology, the Florentine lawyer on beauty, said formed perfect dental display, may be bewitching. Exaggerated they become a repulsive distortion. The student of her own face in the mirror must decide this and govern herself by predilection with her decision.

There is no doubt that a few faces are of that type which looks best in repose, in entire repose. These faces are usually those whose beauty is of line and coloring of white. An air of genius gravely hallucinative goes with such a face. It has nothing in common with swift facial illuminations. Expression with them is slowly and softly pervasive. There is a basic psychological reason for this. The person possessing this face is of the pensive habit and temperament. A smile owes its bewitching qualities to two elements—the rapid play of the intelligence and the

Mme. Lina Cavalieri Scrutinizing Her Face To See What Lines Singing in "Herodiade" Has Made.

"One of the first questions for a woman to decide before her mirror is whether she looks best when smiling or serious."

"Press the lips into a normal line with the face by a slight bandage."

"Cleanse the tongue, when it is furred, by scraping it with a blunt instrument."

How a Woman Can Make the Most of Herself.

WOMEN are divided into classes. What is true of the one section has no reference to the other. "You don't make the most of yourself," said a candid friend to a girl the other day, and the answer somewhat surprised her. "I know I don't, but I can't help it."

"You see, it takes time to dress becomingly. I know I dress my hair all wrong to begin with, but I haven't time to try different ways. Sometimes I know it looks abominable, but I haven't time to take it down again. I have to be out of the house by 9 o'clock. Then it is the same with my clothes. Some girls spend days wandering around the shops looking for the best for their money. I can only spend a rare afternoon, and then it is usually just as I am going away for my holidays, and it is Hobson's choice—I am obliged to take the things or leave them. Of course, if I had plenty of money I shouldn't wear the things that didn't suit me; I should give them away. But then (with a smile) I shouldn't buy them, for I should have plenty of time to look around."

But the business girl is not the only one who doesn't make the best of herself. There is the ugly duckling, who might be the most attractive if she was initiated into the mysteries of making the best of herself. But that would be wrong teaching, many people would say. "It is to a friend who wanted to take her aside best to let a girl be unconscious of herself and her appearance."

Perhaps it is best to leave the talent buried, but Scripture has it otherwise, and the girl who is taught to make the best of herself, of her gifts, of her looks and her clothes, will learn also to make the most of life, of health, and opportunity; she will know the value of parting out her money to usury. Generally, it is only when youth is passing away that, having tried all the wrong things, she is perhaps lucky enough to hit upon the right one.

"What has happened to So-and-So?" is a remark sometimes heard. "Has she grown good-looking, or was I blind before?" And the answer is, "Neither; only So has learned to know herself." The pity is that she was not taught this lesson in her youth, then she would have been considered "good-looking" all the time.

But, beauty is skin-deep—is another cry. Why spend so much time and trouble on so worthless a matter? And the voice is that of the third class of woman.

Teaching the way of life with eyes shut or glued to one corner of the world, they do not see the whole life, therefore because the spot they look upon is unclean, they think that cleansing is the business of life, or if their gaze happens to rest upon the hungry patches, then feeding is the chief end of woman. If they viewed the whole they would understand that neither is complete in itself. It would be a bleak and barren world without the beauty spots. The woman who does not make the best of herself is failing to do her share in the common welfare. A thing of beauty is a joy forever. The well-groomed, well-dressed woman pleases the most unlearned. "I can't go like this," said a girl to a friend who wanted to take her along street children to the natural instinct.

Women of any age who don't care what they look like are doing themselves grave injustice. People take us at our own valuation, and if we dress like a charwoman we must expect to be treated as such.

The girl who makes the most of herself grows up to be a self-reliant woman.

The self-reliant wife looks up her own trains, conducts her own business matters, makes her own friends, decides upon her own investments—that is, if she has any private money to invest—engages her own rooms at hotels, and so thoroughly well knows her capability for looking after herself and her own affairs that, no matter how faithfully the husband may keep his marriage vows of "loving" and "honoring," it is quite impossible for him to—anyhow, outwardly—cherish such an extremely capable young person.

And such wives it is who go far towards killing that sweet strain of protective chivalry which lies dormant in the heart of every averagely well-intentioned husband.

Providence intended every man to cherish and protect, and if this natural instinct is warped, his whole character deteriorates, and he becomes hard, cynical, and bereft of all sentiment and romance.

Obviously one would not advocate in the direction of plotting her own downfall crossing.

Of course, the man's observation was mainly chaff, just as the woman's self-reliance was a matter of habit; but both would have been better without either one or the other.

Obviously, neither would have lived up her own umbrella quite satisfactorily, and, without doubt, she could have got over the crossing without any masculine assistance whatsoever.

But why need we dwell upon these facts so facetiously evident?

How much is to be given her self-reliance a test in order to accept the care and attention which is one of the heritages of the feminine sex?

Thank goodness, the women of to-day, especially the professional and working women, is not able to do without manly help and protection when theirs has occasion that one shall fight for battles by herself.

But when it is decreed that a strong arm is a comfortable thing to have ready to fight those battles for her, do not let a burst of too arrogant feminine self-reliance cause that arm and that coat-sleeve to feel that there is no work left for them to do.

The husband's is his wife's prop, protector and support, and if he is allowed to know this and feel it all the while there will be tenderness and cherishing until the very end.

LIFE and DEATH By Henryk Sienkiewicz

An Allegory by the Famous Author of "Quo Vadis."

THERE were two regions lying side by side, as it were two immense plains, with a clear river flowing between them.

At one point the banks of this river sloped gently to a shallow ford to the shape of a pond with transparent, calm waters.

Beneath the azure surface of this ford could be seen its golden bed, from which grew stems of lotus; on those stems bloomed white and rose-colored flowers above the mirror of water. Rainbow-hued insects and butterflies circled around the flowers and among the palms of the shore, while higher up in the sunny air birds gave out sounds like those of silver bells. This pond was the passage from one region to the other.

The first region was called the Plain of Life, the second the Plain of Death.

The supreme and all mighty Brahma had created both plains, and had commanded the good Vishnu to rule in the Region of Life, while the wise Siva was lord in the Region of Death.

"Do what ye understand to be best," said Brahma to the two rulers.

Hence in the region belonging to Vishnu life moved with all its activity. The sun rose and set; day followed night, and night followed day; the sea rose and fell; in the sky appeared clouds big with rain; the earth was soon covered with forests and crowded with beasts, birds and people.

So that all living creatures might increase greatly and multiply, the kindly god created Love, which he made to be Happiness also.

After this Brahma summoned Vishnu and said to him:

"Thou canst produce nothing better on earth, and since heaven is created already by me, do thou rest and let those whom thou callest people weave the thread of life for themselves unassisted."

Vishnu obeyed this command, and henceforward men ordered their own lives. From their good thoughts came joy, from their evil ones, sorrow; and they saw soon with wonder that life was not an unbroken rejoicing, but that with the life thread which Brahma had mentioned they wove out two webs as it were with two faces—on one of them was a smile, there were tears in the eyes of the other.

They went then to the throne of Vishnu and made complaint to him:

"Oh, Lord, life is grievous through sorrow."

"Let Love give you happiness," said Vishnu in answer.

At these words they went away quieted, for Love indeed scattered their sorrows, which, in view of the happiness given, seemed so insignificant as to be undeserving of notice.

But Love is also the mighty mother of life, hence, though the region which Vishnu ruled was enormous, it was soon insufficient for the myriads of people; soon there was not fruit enough upon trees there, nor berries enough upon bushes, nor honey enough from cliff bees.

Therefore all the men who were wisest fell to cutting down forests for the clearing of land, for the sowing of seed, for the wining of harvests.

Thus into? appeared among people. Soon

"And they entered the water. The rainbow-hued surface opened straightway before them, as if wishing to lighten the passage."

all had to turn to it, and labor became not merely the basis of life, but life itself very nearly.

But from Labor came Toil, and Toil produced Weariness.

Great throngs of people appeared before Vishnu a second time.

"O Lord!" exclaimed they, stretching their hands to him, "toil has weakened our bodies, weariness spreads through our bones; we are yearning for rest, but Life drives us always to labor."

To this Vishnu answered:

"The great and all mighty Brahma has not allowed me to shape life any further, but I am free to make that which will cause it to halt, and rest will then come to you."

And Vishnu made Sleep.

Men received this new gift with rejoicing, and very soon saw in it one of the greatest boons given by the kindly thou far. In sleep vanished care and vexation; during sleep strength returned to the weary; sleep, like a cherishing mother, wiped away tears of sorrow and surrounded the heads of the slumbering with oblivion.

So people glorified sleep, and repeated:

"Be blessed, for thou art far better than life in our waking hours."

And they had one regret only, that it did not continue forever. After sleep came awakening, and after awakening came labor with fresh toil and weariness.

This thought began soon to torture all men so sorely that for the third time they stood before Vishnu.

"O Lord," said they, "thou hast given us a boon which, though great and unspeakably precious, is incomplete as it now appears. Will thou grant us that sleep be eternal?"

Vishnu wrinkled his brows then in anger at this their insistence, and answered:

"I cannot give what ye ask of me, but go to the neighboring ford, and beyond ye will find that for which ye are seeking."

The people heard the god's voice and went in legions immediately to the ford, and, halting there, gazed at the shore lying opposite.

Beyond the clear, calm, and flower-bedecked surface stretched the Plain of Death, or the Kingdom of Siva.

The sun never rose and never set in that region; there was no day and no night there, but the whole plain was of a lily-colored, absolute clearness. No shadow fell in that region, for clearness flowered there so thoroughly that it seemed the real essence of Siva's dominions.

The region was not empty. As far as the eye could reach were seen heights and valleys where beautiful trees stood in groups; on those trees rose climbing plants, while ivy and grapevines were hanging from the cliff sides.

But the cliffs and the tree trunks and the slender plant stems were almost transparent, as if formed out of light grown material. The leaves of the ivy had in them a delicate roseate light as of dawn. And all was in marvellous rest, such as none on the Plain of Life had experienced; all was as if sunk in serene meditation, as if dreaming, and resting in continuous slumber, untreatened by waking.

In the clear air not the slightest breeze was discovered, not a flower was seen moving, not a leaf showed a quiver.

The people who had come to the shore with long conversation and clamor grew silent at sight of those lily-colored, motionless spaces, and whispered:

"What quiet! How everything rests there in clearness!"

"Oh, yes, there is rest and unbroken repose in that region."

So some, namely, those who were weariest, said after a silence:

"Let us find the sleep which is surely unbroken."

And they entered the water. The rainbow-hued surface opened straightway before them, as if wishing to lighten the passage. Those who remained on the shore began now to call after them, but no man turned his head, and all hurried forward with willingness and lightly, attracted more and more by the charm of that wonderful region.

The throng which gazed from the shore of Life at them noted this also: that as they moved forward their bodies grew gradually less heavy, becoming transparent and purer, more radiant, and as it were blending with that absolute clearness which filled the whole Plain of Death, or Siva's kingdom.

And when they had passed and disposed themselves amid flowers and at trees or the bases of cliffs, to repose there, their eyes were closed, but their faces had on them not only an expression of ineffable peace, but also of happiness such as Love itself on the Plain of Life had never given.

Seeing this, those who had halted behind said one to another:

"The region belonging to Siva is sweeter and better."

And they began to pass to that shore in increasing numbers. There went in solemn procession old men, and men in ripe years, and husbands and wives, and mothers who led little children, and maidens, and youths, and then thousands and millions of people pushed on toward that Calm Passage, till at last the Plain of Life was depopulated almost entirely.

Then Vishnu, whose task it was to keep life from extinction, was frightened because of the advice which he had given in his anger, and not knowing what to do else hastened quickly to Brahma.

"Save Life, O Creator!" said he. "Behold, thou hast made the inheritance of Death now so beautiful, so serene, and so blissful that all men are leaving my kingdom."

"Have none remained with thee, there?" inquired Brahma.

"Only one youth and one maiden, who are in love beyond measure; they renounce endless bliss rather than close their eyes and gaze on each other no longer."

"What dost thou wish, then?"

"Make the region of Death less delightful less happy; if not, even those two who their earthly time of love shall be ended will leave me and follow the others."

Brahma thought for a moment and answered:

"No! Oh, no! I will not decrease beauty and happiness in the region of Death, but I will do something for Life in its own realm. Henceforward men will not pass to the other shore willingly, they must be forced to it."

When he had said this he made a thick veil out of darkness which no one could see through, and next he created two terrible beings. One of these he named Fear and the other one Dark Drake. He commanded them to hang that black veil at the Passage.

Thereafter Vishnu's kingdom was as crowded with life as it had been, for though the region of Death was as calm as serene, and as blissful as ever, people dreaded the Passage.

The Only Statue A Goddess "Sat For"

The Unique Bronze Just Recovered from Cruel Emperor Caligula's Sunken Pleasure Barge, and Which Is Believed to be a Portrait of His Sister Drusilla, Whom He Deified.

Caligula's Barge as It Appeared on Lake Nemorensi in Ancient Times.

THE Emperor Caligula, who ruled to the surface—and museums in Italy the Roman Empire from 37 to 41 A. D., was a very old and unpleasant tyrant. He made a favorite horse a senator and he made his sister Drusilla, who was very beautiful and of whom Caligula was very fond indeed, a goddess. He stripped his subjects of all their wealth and placed a part of it in a gigantic pleasure barge which floated on the beautiful Lake Nemi, which was Lake Nemorensi of the ancients and also "the Mirror Diana," because the lake was also the site of a temple of Diana.

Caligula's pleasure barge lies now sunken with that of another, Emperor Tiberius, at the bottom of the water; from time to time objects of ancient art, jewels and gold have been recovered from it.

The latest object to be recovered is a very great prize. It is a bronze statue, life size, which has been declared by experts to be a portrait likeness of the very Drusilla whom Caligula deified. It occupies the unique place in art of being the only statue a goddess ever "sat for."

When the figure was brought up there were also recovered a number of exquisite small bronze statues about a foot high. These, it is thought, formed part of a shrine of the "goddess" Drusilla and are meant to represent priestesses in the act of worship.

It would appear then that Caligula carried the worship of his sister so far as to make her the tutelary diety of his pleasure barge. His friends and acquaintances became more and more very earnest in their worship of her, for the tyrant had a most unconfortable way with those who did not join heartily in his caprices.

If, as the experts believe, the bronze is an actual representation of Drusilla, Caligula's enormous.

The two galleys of Caligula and Tiberius have lain at the bottom of Lake Nemi for nearly 2000 years. They are about the most magnificent examples of equipment and ornamentation anything that the most imaginative mind of modern times has dreamed. The orgies held on them were unspeakable.

The galley of Caligula was about 300 feet long. The deck was paved with mosaic work of porphyry and serpentine, intermixed with colored glass. Such bits of treasure as have been recovered from this sunken floating palace show that it must have contained a wealth of rare statuary, ivory carvings, bronze and silver plaques, everything of worth and beauty known to the age.

These details, and enough other information to enable archaeologists to picture with reasonable accuracy the prayer of these two ancient pleasure craft, have been gained in the several attempts of divers to recover the treasure in gold and jewels that went down with them. They have brought to the surface—and museums in Italy now contain them—many sections of the leaden plates and the bronze nails which made them fast to the oaken sheathing.

Sections of beautiful bronze grillwork, bits of ivory carvings, bronze and silver plaques, an exquisite bronze head of Medusa, bronze heads of lions and wolves holding in their mouths bronze rings for holding mooring chains, irregular pieces of alabaster, which evidently formed parts of the splendid baths on board, a portion of the wooden prow covered with leaden plates fixed with bronze nails, still exist in museums to help the tale of the sunken pleasure barge.

On this remarkable craft were gardens with rare flowers and fruit bearing vines and trees. A temple was built on terraces high up at the stern, where the despot worshipped Drusilla, the Roman gods, or himself, as the mood seized him, for Caligula also deified himself and had his own retinue of priests and choir boys to assist in the ceremonies. Above the garden were temples for feasts and the orgies, and on a platform at the prow was a great jewelled throne under a canopy of precious woods inlaid with gold, silver and jewels. On this throne Caligula sat and witnessed the spectacles in the garden designed for his amusement, when he did not feel like joining in them.

Along the deck rail were baths, large and small, and couches covered with the costliest fabrics scattered about.

Tiberius had been a robber, but Caligula, who followed him, stopped at nothing to surround himself with the essence of the beauty and riches of his empire. He amassed sums of money which threw the wealth of Tiberius in the shade. Instituting novel systems of levying taxes upon both rich and poor, and before his death had the whole Roman population in daily fear of what was coming next. From the poor he demanded all wealth of their ancestors and he compelled the rich to make wills in his favor. If these rich "benefactors" did not die quickly enough to leave him their sales, acting as auctioneer himself, he "encouraged" them to do so.

The Bronze Statue, Supposed to be That of Drusilla, the Emperor Caligula's Sister, Surrounded by Other Little Bronze Figures, in the Act of Worship.

Partly as a pastime and partly to fill his fabulous sums for simple living increased his fortune, Caligula held auctions. He shook loaded dice and loaned money at usurious rates, whether the borrower needed the money or not. One bright New Year's morning he announced that he would receive gifts. It was a simple announcement, much like the present-day method of advising your friends when you are "at home" to receive guests. But the people knew what it meant. Before the day was done Caligula's palace was loaded to the roof with costliest gems, tapestries, statuary, rugs, and gold and silver ornaments in the empire. The homes of the rich were practically stripped of all that was valuable and the dwellings of the poorer classes were denuded of the last thing of value which had survived previous demands of this ancient exemplar of predatory wealth.

It evidently was a mania with Caligula to spend and squander, with riches for itself, and he found fawned over the glistening jewels and gold. Then he removed his sandals and allowed his feet to thrill with their touch, and then rolled in them.

During all the time that Caligula was busy gathering up the bulk of the wealth of his kingdom he was beset with the fear of just such a death as finally overtook him—a death by violence. So fearful was he of his fate on his floating palace, and consequently the major portion of the wealth which he gained was placed on his galley.

That is why interest in raising the sunken barge and its treasure has been so keen.

Archaeologists and historians alike believe that they will find much of value to them when the wealth so long hidden is finally realized.

For a number of years the pleasure galley of Caligula, referred to by the old Roman historians, was believed to be a fairy story.

But it was brought to the attention of archaeologists anally that fishermen on Lake Nemi, who were actually bringing up bits of old choice wood or little ornaments from beneath the spot where Caligula's barge was moored, had donated Divers were sent down, and the galley had hidden in the mud was located.

Then came sporadic attempts that have been made to raise the vessel, but owing to the depth of time that it has been under water, and the consequent frailty of its timbers, the task has been unsuccessful. In the six months' work just finished, the Duke di Leuchi and a French engineer named Fabretti went down in diving bells to examine the vessel. After that one of those attempt was made until 1895, when Signor Eliseo Borghi brought up several treasures.

About three years ago a proposition was advanced to drain the lake and thus turn the light of day once more upon the sunken wealth, but for some reason the scheme has never been carried out. There is little doubt, however, that something will be done before long to take from the mud the precious mankind by Caligula from the people to satisfy his passionate greed.

The lake wherein this wealth lies hidden is not far from Rome. From the days of Julius Caesar, who, attracted by its beauty, built himself a villa there, the region has become a fashionable resort of the Roman world in imperial times.

Chloroforming Plants To Make Them Grow.

A REMARKABLE series of experiments in the use of anaesthetics to increase plant growth have been made recently at the Vermont Experimental Station of the United States Department of Agriculture by Professor W. Stuart, the head of the station.

The investigations, German botanist, Johannsen, in 1900 discovered that ether and chloroform administered to plants during their rest period will cause the bud to grow earlier than usual. Ether and chloroform drugs is the reverse of the action upon man, who, therefore, chloroform and their kind rendering dormant many of the functions of the human organism, so that he can go beyond giving as a theory that certain functions which lead to natural plant growth during the rest period are not paralized by the anaesthetics, did not volunteer an explanation of the phenomena he evoked. Professor Stuart gives mainly by results without going into reasons, and, indeed, just what happens to the plants under treatment is still too obscure for definite setting forth.

Various means have been and are employed in connection the dormant period of plants, such as pruning, covering, attention to the conditions of growing wood in the case of woody plants, and the like.

But the use of anaesthetics to produce premature sleep is a recent bulletin of the Department of Agriculture that the use of anaesthetics is still in the experimental stage, and is confined to forcing of plants and subjects which are not considered as yet assumed commercial importance among those engaged in this work.

"In Germany and France, however," he says, "the practice is carried on extensively in many of the large commercial establishments. There one at the present time is almost wholly confined to the flowering shrubs, such as lilacs, verbenisms, deutzias, spiraea, azaleas, etc., which lend themselves most readily to anaesthetic influences. This plan of plants come into bloom early in Spring, complete their growth at a comparatively early date the temperature, the anaesthetic being pumped from above into an open vessel within the receptacle. The amount used per cubic foot of air space is largely governed by the temperature, moisture, season of the year, and kind of plant to be treated. The higher the temperature and the later the season the more sensitive plant is to the effect, hence the amount and time of exposure must be varied to vary accordingly with the temperature and the season when treatment is given.

By Rev. George W. Knox, D. D.

From The Westminster, the Presbyterian religious weekly.)

A PROMINENT layman expressed or excused his lack of participation in the ordinary work of the church with the remark, "It is not a man's job. If the church should burn down, we would collect the money and rebuild it at once; that would be a man's job."

He expressed a widespread feeling. Two prominent clergymen were looking at a baseball match years ago, together with an immense assemblage of men. One clergyman said to the other, "There's hardly a man here who don't own corn one like this to the churches" Before his brother minister could reply, a stranger from the seat behind leaned over and tapped the minister on the shoulder and said, "Beg pardon for butting in, but the reason men don't come to church is because you don't play ball." It was his way of expressing the same sentiment. In the church there is nothing really doing; a little religious sentiment may be secured—the young may be instructed—there are church accidables and receptions for those who like that sort of thing.

A college president puts into the mouth of one of his students the student's objection to the ministerial office: "The minister seems to me like the man who sits in the grandstand and explains the game to the ladies." When the church has a man's job on its hands it does not get a large crowd. Nothing appeals to our young men more than fields which demand hard labor and much sacrifice. The young fellow likes to see things done with his hand; to take the ordinary passions and maintain it at its ordinary efficiency and fulfill the ordinary round of duty pails upon many of our most efficient ministers. They, too, feel the demand for a man's job.

The same sentiment runs through all our American life, and men who have only the routine for the employment of their energies, who have no great problems to face and no great difficulties to overcome are comparative failures. All the appeals which adventure and war made in the past now go to this, that a man shall do a man's job.

Our Scriptures, Old Testament and New, are emphatically virile books; the old prophets were speaking to men and summoning their full manhood to tasks which demanded courage, strength, endurance, intelligence. It was not the rebuilding of a church which they regarded as a man's job, but the reconstruction of society, a reformation from the very foundation to the top. They failed in the effort because the manhood of Israel was not equal to the task proposed. Strength failed, intelligence was not keen enough, courage gave way, and Israel went to its doom.

There is still the summons written in the sacred pages to a man's job. The conditions are not so desperate as those which Amos and Jeremiah faced; we might succeed where Israel failed; but the call is in the same task to a man's job, a man may sweep. We need the voice of the prophet to describe the task. We live, most of us, in a busy community, though our nominal habitation be in a great city.

Morning and night we traverse the same streets; the same few doors are open to us; we meet the same familiar faces; we pass by the multitudes as if they were not; they affect us only as this multitude. Our charity is divine and we rejoice to it, but charity, let it be never so beautiful, fails to redeem the conditions which it relieves. The largest measure upon economic considerations.

The ghastly glory of tenement fames and crushed lives is made, and the pittances which women receive for toil which the heart sink. It is not a living wage they get, but a crushing, killing wage. Beside the question of wages, a question which affects the entire community, and for whose answer every one of us is responsible, is the further question of property, involving rent.

Modern life has its beautiful and its luxurious side—it charms us, it fascinates us, it comes to be necessary for us; but it has its other side of frightful, hopeless toil with crushed humanity as the result.

The man's job is plain and clear before the church. It cannot be done by ministers at all in the grand stand and explain the game to the ladies; it cannot be done through the attendance in a fashionable church of well-dressed people Sunday morning; it cannot be done by chosen talks and receptions; it cannot be done by a multitude of men who shall bring patience, perseverance, courage, intelligence and absolute devotion.

If our young men can supply these, they will show that the message of the prophets has sunk into their souls. If they cannot supply these, remembering the wealth of the church and its ultimate control of the business and property interests of the land, it will call upon itself the curse of Him who rebuked those who for a pretence made long prayers while they devoured the portion of the widow and the orphan.

Table expenses and health

YOU are interested in these things; both are important.

Last month we gave you the highest medical authority for eating more Quaker Oats, Sir James Crichton Browne, LL. D., F. R. S., of London; now let's consider the question of eating Quaker Oats from a practical, everyday point of view:

Dollar for dollar, you get more food value in Quaker Oats than in any other food. You can prove this for yourself by actual tests; you'll find that, as you increase the amount of Quaker Oats you eat, your health will improve and the cost of your table will decrease.

It's worth trying for the sake of economy, but it's worth more from the standpoint of health and vigor, and you'll find that a big dish of Quaker Oats, with sugar and milk (or cream), for breakfast or supper is perfectly delicious.

Quaker Oats is the one perfect human food; all nourishment, no waste; easily digested; good for all ages and within the reach of all purses.

Regular size package 10 cents

also packed in special round packages at 15c, and in the larger size family packages and in hermetically sealed tins for hot climates

BARGAIN DAY

TWO COMPLETE PATTERNS BOTH FOR TEN CENTS

SIMPLE AND ATTRACTIVE DESIGNS FOR THE LITTLE MISS AND THE BOY EASILY MADE AT HOME

No. 8665.

THE jumper dress illustrated is just the thing for late Winter or Spring wear, while if developed in linen or chambray and worn with a white guimpe it will make a desirable dress for Summer wear.

A gored kilted skirt is attached to a natty jumper having a rounded neck edge and deep-cut armholes, while a neat belt finishes the garment.

The pattern is cut in five sizes—4, 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. The 8-year size requires 2⅝ yards of 36-inch material.

NO. 8659.

THESE little suits are so simple and easy to make that no home dressmaker need fear to attempt the sewing. The design here shown has double-breasted fronts and a sleeve that is plaited over the wrist. Linen, chambray, flannel or cloth may be used with equally good effect.

The pattern is cut in three sizes—2, 4 and 6 years. It requires 2¾ yards of 27-inch material for the 4-year size.

To obtain both of these patterns, fill out the accompanying coupon and mail with 10 cents in silver or stamps to BARGAIN DAY, Post Office Box 200, New York City.
